FIVE OFFICES CLOSED

Postal Lockouts Hit Island

Nanaimo Strike Said Reason

Times News Services

Five Vancouver Island post offices are closed today as a result of lockouts ordered by the district director of postal services in Vancouver in the continuing dispute between Ottawa and the postal unions.

Port Alberni, Courtenay, Ladysmith, Campbell River and Duncan post offices were shut down after the union called walkouts in Nanaimo, Vancouver International Airport and Ladner offices.

The five Island centres closed by the post office department all receive their mail through the Nanaimo office. More than 200 workers are involved in British Columbia and close to 1,000 are either on strike or locked out across Canada.

The day's tally shows the unions had called out a total of 580 workers in seven centres across the country.

The post office department retaliated by sending home 416 men from 27 stations.

Robert McGarry, strike director for the Toronto area, said a directive from national strike headquarters in Ottawa said that workers in Barrie, Alliston, Orangeville and the southwest end of the City of Toronto, all in Ontario and in Regina did not report for work today.

He said that according to the Ottawa directive these and the B.C. offices were the only areas where workers would be on strike today.

He also said that post offices in the Ontario centres of Midland and Newmarket and Station W — the northwest end of Toronto — were closed by postal authorities.

"It has to be an illegal lockout," he said. "There's mail in Midland and Newmarket and Station W is loaded."

PLANS SUIT

The Council of Postal Unions said Thursday it is planning legal action against Postmaster-General Eric Kierans because of the shutdowns of local post offices this week.

Centres shut down Thursday were Edmundston, Grand Falls and Campbellton, all in New Brunswick.

Duncan local president of the postal union, Mrs. Mary Woods, said today the shutdown was expected. A total of 17 employees and four rural routes are affected there.

At Ladysmith, where four employees were laid off, postmaster Chuck Irving said there was no mail.

Mrs. Pearl Cassidy, the spokesman for postal workers, said they are "rather disconcerted" because although there are no letters there was work which can be done over the wicket. She called the post office action "rather high-handed" and inconvenient to patrons.

Postmasters called today's action closures because of reduced business, not lockouts.

The Grand Falls post office reopened today and the Edmundston office was scheduled to do so at noon local time. Offices at Campbellton and Dalhousie, also in New Brunswick, were to be closed all day.

Earlier in the week, 13 Ontario and Quebec centres were shut down but re-opened after Montreal workers ended a 48-hour walkout.

The council, negotiating for 27,000 letter carriers and other postal workers, said in a statement that "Kierans' action is not only a violation of various laws and regulations, but is also a vicious act, taken without regard for the citizens of Canada and the postal system."

Post offices were ordered Monday to close down if they thought service could not be provided.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, meanwhile, said he'd be "delighted" if the unions would be willing to accept a settlement of the dispute giving wage increases of 7¼ per cent a year.

BELFAST SEARCH YIELDS WEAPONS

BELFAST (AP) — More than 11,000 British troops took part today in the biggest arms search ever made in Northern Ireland. They found eight rifles, four pistols and 4,700 rounds of ammunition in the sweep through the Black Mountains overlooking Belfast.

The search was part of a huge security operation in advance of marches Monday by the Protestant Order of Orange.

Cabinet Splits On Telesat Contract Issue

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A recommendation to the government that the contract for Canada's first telecommunications satellite be awarded to Hughes Aircraft of California has touched off a cabinet fight between Communications Minister Eric Kierans and Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, according to sources here.

'Buy Canadian' Idea Favored

The proposal that the bid be awarded to the American firm was made by Telesat Canada Corporation, for which Kierans is the responsible cabinet minister, and is being disputed by Mackasey on the grounds that it would rob Canada of the opportunity to develop its own science and technology in space communications.

Mackasey is reported to favor giving the contract to a Canadian firm even if the cost would be higher—and it apparently would be.

RCA Limited of Montreal, armed with a letter of intention from the Canadian government, presented a price bid for building Canada's satellite of around $42 million. The company said it understood the intention was to build existing Canadian space technology and to become a leader in the development of a satellite communications system rather than simply a user of the new techniques as they may be developed by others.

As a result of feasibility studies earlier, RCA was chosen as the prime contractor. It received a letter of intent dated June 20, 1969, from Kierans indicating a contract would be negotiated within four months for the development, fabrication, integration and test of the satellite. RCA accepted a direction contained in the letter of intent to use another major Canadian company as a subcontractor.

Company Began to Prepare

On the basis of the letter of intention and RCA's understanding of government desire for a Canadian national space program to upgrade this country's technology in the new field, the company was authorized by its directors to construct an aerospace building specifically for the design, development and construction of space hardware.

It started to hire additional engineers and support personnel in anticipation of the requirements of the program and estimated cost of the new facilities at $4 million.

It came as a shock to the company when its first proposal to Telesat, outlining the high risk involved, was refused on the grounds it was based on RCA's assumption that the development phase of the program should be "cost reimbursable." This had been the practice followed in previous Canadian satellite programs.

RCA was asked to submit a firm price for the program as soon as possible. Specifications were upgraded. RCA then proposed a firm price of $55 million including all non-recurring costs in connection with the new technology. The bid was submitted to Telesat on May 11, 1970.

U.S. Firm Offers Low Bid

At that time Telesat received an unsolitited bid from Hughes Aircraft with Northern Electric Co. Ltd. at around $30 million.

Wednesday a new bid to build the satellite was reportedly presented to the government by a Toronto firm, Spar Aerospace Products Ltd. of Malton. The Spar bid would involve RCA of Canada and Lockheed Aircraft of the U.S. in a new Canadian based company which would build the satellite for a reported $38 million with 65 per cent Canadian content.

At the same time RCA of Canada withdrew its bid and presented a new one.

RCA has informed Telesat and Kierans it would be prepared to enter into discussions looking toward a cost reimbursable incentive approach in which the company's fee would be based on its successfully meeting mutually agreed standards for cost goals, delivery schedules and performance. In these discussions RCA would be prepared to discuss the cost estimates and risk evaluations that it has developed.

It set a target cost of $35 million for the program with 65 per cent Canadian content. It has given its assurance of using its best efforts to complete the program on that basis.

RCA has pointed to the unfortunate circumstances for Canadian industry that would arise if the Canadian domestic satellite were to be built in the U.S. It has offered to hold discussions with Telesat Canada or with other government departments in an effort to resolve the problem that will undoubtedly have a long-term effect on Canada's role in the

Sands Not Scapegoat Insists Labor Minister

By BOB MITCHELL

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson today termed as "most mischievous" remarks by a labor official that deputy minister Bill Sands was appointed mediator in the construction lockout to get Peterson "off the hook."

B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Ray Haynes said Thursday Sands' assignment in talks going on between unions and the Construction Labor Relations Association is to save face for the provincial government.

"The pressure is now on Sands to work hard to get Peterson off the hook," Haynes said.

He was referring to the 10-day deadline set Tuesday by Peterson for both sides in the three-month-old construction lockout to resume work or face compulsory arbitration.

DATE CONFIRMED

Peterson confirmed today the 10-day period will end at midnight July 17, one week from today.

"If Haynes spent as much time trying to settle disputes as he does causing trouble between labor and government, he'd be earning the big salary he gets," Peterson said.

Peterson said Tuesday he wanted work started in 10 days, with a 60-day period to follow in which settlement of the wage dispute between labor and management could take place.

The unions have indicated they won't return to work unless they get signed agreements with the CLRA in the meantime.

Thursday Peterson said if work does not resume by the deadline there won't be any 60-day period, and the government would invoke the back-to-work arbitration section of the Mediation Commission Act.

Iceland Premier Dies in Fire

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (Reuters) — Premier Bjarni Benediktsson, 62, who led the movement bringing Iceland into NATO, was burned to death early today along with his wife and grandson when a fire swept the premier's state-owned summer house at Thingvalla, 38 miles from the capital.

The premier, his wife Sigridur Bjoernsdottir and his two-year-old grandson Benedikt Wilmundarsson went there to spend the night.

Firemen hurried to the scene when the alarm was raised but the wooden building was reduced to ashes.

A neighbor raised the alarm when he saw the house in flames.

Benediktsson, chairman of the Independence party, became premier in November, 1963, when he succeeded Olafur Thors who resigned for health reasons.

He had previously served in the Thors administration as minister of justice and later as foreign minister.

TONKIN RESOLUTION REPEALED . . . AGAIN

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The Senate emphasized today its repudiation of the 1964 Tonkin Gulf resolution by voting a second time to repeal it.

The vote was in the form of a resolution to repeal the measure, which was rushed through Congress in August, 1964, following a reported attack by North Vietnamese torpedo boats on two American destroyers.

The congressional action was later used by President Johnson to justify the American troop buildup in Vietnam.

SASK. ORDERS ARBITRATION

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher, taking a step he has threatened for more than a week, today signed his name to an order-in-council bringing Saskatchewan's construction workers under compulsory arbitration.

The emergency measure was to be sent to Lt.-Gov. Stephen Worobetz later in the day for his signature. The law was passed 12 days ago but the final step was withheld in the hope a settlement would be reached.

Thatcher, speaking at a news conference, said amendments bringing plumbers and electricians under scope of the arbitration law "will take effect immediately."

While the plumbers and electricians have returned to work wherever jobs are available, negotiations with contractors on new collective agreements have been deadlocked.

Egypt Loses Three MiGs

From Reuters — AP

Israeli and Egyptian jets fought several dogfights over the Suez canal today and a Tel Aviv military spokesman said three Egyptian MiG-21s were shot down.

The MiGs were downed by missiles and aerial cannon fire when they tried to intercept a number of Israeli raiders bombing Egyptian targets in the northern sector of the canal this morning, the spokesman said.

Campbell Moves to Prevent 'Deserter and Hippie Haven'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell has delayed city efforts to help the national hostel task force use the Beattie Street Armory here as a resting place for transient youth.

Campbell deferred for one week a request to use a lot beside the armory for sanitary trailers and said following a council meeting Thursday night he wants to investigate the people involved.

"I was concerned that a military establishment was becoming a draft dodger, deserter and hippie haven," he said. (See Cool-Aid story Page 2).

Later, Deni Robideau, 23, a member of the hostel co-ordinating committee, said the sanitary facilities are needed to expand use of the armory to accommodate about 100 young people, male and female.

Present toilet and washing facilities limit the hostel to 25 males.

Campbell said the idea of separate facilities for males and females was "very moral," but added he was worried "they may be trying to set up communal living."

The federal government hostel plan would provide 2,000 beds for youth travelling across the country.

The state secretary's department has ordered that armories across the country be used for hostels.

Earlier Thursday, Mayor Don L. Gillespie of Revelstoke, a railway town on the western edge of the Rockies, said he had informed Ottawa that the town's armory could not house a hostel because it was in an area zoned for commercial use.

THE WEATHER

The weatherman was feeling benevolent today, and forecast sunshine for Victoria's weekend.

The weather office at Victoria International Airport predicts generally sunny weather for Saturday with an expected high of 72. Overnight low will be 50.

Winds around the city will be southwesterly 15 or so Saturday afternoon, dying down at night. Winds in Juan de Fuca Strait will continue to be brisk, reaching westerly 25 m.p.h. in the late afternoon. The beaches will be nice this weekend, for those who don't mind a little wind.

Deadlock in Strike At Ottawa Citizen

OTTAWA (CP)—Talks were to continue today between the Ottawa Citizen and its International Typographical Union local in an attempt to settle a contract dispute in which all unions at the Southam newspaper are off the job.

A Citizen spokesman said there was "very little progress made" at discussions Thursday which he said had been hampered by "violence occurring in connection with the strike."

He said that in one incident an office boy had been slugged and that the slugging was "in connection with the strike." There also had been a number of cases Thursday where newspapers had been seized and scattered. The Citizen deplored these actions which, the spokesman said, were hampering negotiations.

Meanwhile, the unions announced they were planning a demonstration near the Citizen plant a block south of Parliament Hill.

Picket lines continued at the newspaper for the fifth consecutive day. They were set up Monday after compositors were refused admission to the day shift after what management described as a work slowdown Sunday night.

OTHERS WALK OUT

Other craft unions and the Citizen's American Newspaper Guild local of about 150 members walked off the job in support of the ITU printers.

The guild members were officially considered dismissed Wednesday following a letter earlier in the week by R. W. Southam, the Citizen publisher, that their walkout was a violation of contract and of the Ontario Labor Relations Act. He set Wednesday as the deadline for a return to work by guildsmen. Most did not go back to their jobs.

The ITU has been seeking a contract similar to one at the Ottawa Journal.

Christopher Young, the Citizen editor, said Thursday that the 85,000-circulation newspaper will attempt to "get more people" to fill out the skeleton staff now working if the current dispute with 300 regular employees becomes protracted.

2,500 Acres Destroyed By Forest Fire

By The Canadian Press

Firefighters struggled today to cut off a raging forest fire that has swept over more than 2,500 acres east of Penticton since breaking out Thursday afternoon.

The blaze, which "exploded" in a logging area, is not endangering the Okanagan valley town of more than 16,000 as it moves in a northeasterly direction.

Fifty experienced firefighters were battling the blaze. The main effort was directed at building a five-mile road into inaccessible bush so fire guards could be constructed ahead of the flames.

Direct fighting of the fire was interrupted late Thursday because it was too hot, forestry officials said. Water bombers that had attacked the flames in the early stages were withdrawn when the fire became too big.

The fire straddles Penticton Creek, about six miles east of the town.

Penticton's main water supply is carried to a holding reservoir through the creek and there was some concern that the bulldozer operations and ash from the fire would dirty the water.

NO HAZARD

However, health authorities said there was no serious hazard.

Mayor F. Douglas Stuart discounted reports that water being used in water-bombing operations might contain DDT and could harm the city's water supply.

He said the only restriction on water use anticipated is a cut-down of lawn sprinkling.

If the reservoir water became too dirty, the town would pump water from Okanagan Lake, a normal procedure when summer demand is heavy, he said.

Two bulldozer operators suffered minor burns Thursday.

Mercury Level Of Fish Unsafe

Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said Thursday fish in Pinchi Lake, about 80 miles northwest of Prince George, have been found to contain unsafe levels of mercury and fishermen have been advised not to eat them.

Kiernan said mercury levels in the flesh of 20 fish taken from lake in recent months were found consistently to exceed the .5 part per million content recommended by Canadian public health authorities as the safe level for human consumption.

Levels in lake trout ranged from about 2 to 4 parts per million, while lower but generally unsafe levels were found in whitefish and rainbow trout.

MERCURY MINE

Dr. J. Hatter, director of the B.C. Fish and Wildlife Branch, said Pinchi Lake has received intensive scrutiny because of the temporary operation of a mercury mine on the site during the Second World War.

Kiernan said fish sampled in other lakes near Pinchi were found to be safe to eat, although their mercury content was somewhat higher than that of fish in other areas of the province.

"These generally higher levels of mercury are probably due to the presence of mercury-bearing ore throughout the area."

Kiernan said further announcements regarding fish in the area "will be made from time to time."

YOUNGSTER'S CONDITION CALLED POOR

A 2½-year-old child is in poor condition at St. Joseph's Hospital today after being struck by a car near her Colwood home Thursday afternoon.

Cheryl Day, of 3110 Wishart, suffered internal injuries in the accident in front of her house. RCMP said she was struck by a car driven by Steven James Page, 16, of 4276 Metchosin Road, Colwood.

Children were playing at the roadside when the accident happened.

Parents living in the area said they want a speed-limit of 20 miles per hour set in the region because of the number of children who play near the road.

25,000 AFFECTED

About 25,000 men have been affected by the construction lockout which began in mid-April.

Unions taking part in talks are carpenters, plumbers, bricklayers, laborers and heat and frost insulators.

Other locked-out unions are teamsters, cement masons, operating engineers and bricklayers' helpers.

With an end to the lockout in sight, several local employers have begun to contact union officers with requests for manpower.

Unions are reported supplying men only to independent contractors who had signed interim agreements during the lockout.

In Vancouver the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' Union, which struck 20 Vancouver hotels three weeks ago, reported individual contracts have been signed with three hotels.

The union is asking for a $1 hourly increase over two years for about 300 members and has rejected offers of 35 cents. Rates range from $1.46 an hour to $2.50.

Hearing Ordered Into E & N Bid

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian Transportation Commission today ordered a public hearing for Aug. 5 into the second formal bid launched by the E and N Railway to scrap its passenger service on Vancouver Island.

The hearing, by the CTC's railway committee, will open at 9:30 a.m. in the Victoria Law Courts building where "all persons who wish to do so may present their views."

The service involves a daily round trip between Victoria and Courtenay by self-propelled Budd-car, serving the communities along the way. The E and N also operates freight service on the same line, but it wants to keep that.

The CTC released its own calculation of losses suffered by the passenger service in three accounting years.

The deficits were listed as $102,455 in 1966, $115,880 in 1967 and $118,131 in 1968.

These were considerably reduced from the original loss figures presented by the Canadian Pacific Railway, E and N's parent company. Some $21,640, for instance, was chopped off the company's 1968 figure by the CTC aduit.

The CPR several years ago applied to Ottawa for permission to drop the passenger service but a salvo of protest from community organizations, citizens and municipalities forced postponement of that bid to document losses or a re-application.

Since then Victoria's Mayor Courtney Haddock has tried to persuade Island communities to help offset losses through municipal grants so it remains to be seen whether protests will develop on the same scale again.

The CTC said besides appearing at the hearing, anyone wishing to oppose or support the CPR application also has the option of mailing comments within 21 days to the commission's headquarters at 275 Slater Street in Ottawa with a copy forwarded to the CPR head office at Windsor Station in Montreal.

Space Bid Changed Senator Charges

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sen. John L. McClellan (D—Ark.) charged Thursday that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration secretly altered the low bid of an aerospace firm which then lost in the competition for a $50 million satellites contract.

The senator also said NASA permitted the winning firm, General Electric Co., to reduce overhead costs in its final offer so that the total was "just below" that of its competitor, Fairchild Hiller Corp. McClellan said a Seattle study showed the GE reduction, however, might "very well result in increasing the net cost to the government, rather than lowering it."

The effect of NASA's action, McClellan said, was to "keep the competition open" despite the fact that Fairchild's proposal had been "considerably lower in costs" than GE's bid during most of the competition.

McClellan also complained about the length of the procurement process, started in 1966. Since then, he charged, NASA has spent $22 million to fund the competition for the $50 million dollar contract.

BUILD SATELLITE

The case involves the selection by the space agency on April 8 of GE's space division, to design and build two experimental communications satellites for educational and scientific programs.

Fairchild officials immediately protested the award, alleging that certain of its technical data were in effect given to GE to help improve its proposal, that improper cost analyses were used and that GE was permitted to turn in its final bid after the deadline.

Last week, the General Accounting Office reported on its investigation of the award and told NASA it should "reconsider" its decision because it had "prejudiced" the position of Fairchild Hiller. The space agency announced shortly thereafter that it would reopen the contract—the first time in NASA history it had taken such action.

future of space communications.

Earlier, RCA had received clear indications that Telesat preferred the Hughes proposal which involved much lower costs than the RCA bid. The company thus found itself in the middle between Telesat's preference for the lower cost American proposal and the original concept that called for a national Canadian program. On this basis RCA reviewed its decision and submitted its lower bid with different ground rules.

Instead of a Canadian national space program with RCA limited as the chosen instrument it was now purely a commercial proposition between RCA and Telesat Canada without clear recognition of the costs of starting up in a new technology in Canada. RCA has argued it should not be required to compete at this stage with an established U.S. space contractor in the development of Canadian satellite technology.

Girls From Welfare Not Quite All-Stars

It was the bottom of the third and tension was mounting.

A close score, two out and a three and two count.

The pitcher started a hard stare at the batter, went into an intimidating windup, dropped the ball and dashed for the nearest dugout.

From the shadows, a muffled cry: "Just wait'll I get my pants fixed and I'll be right back."

Shades of Charlie Brown.

The girls from Child Welfare lost again Thursday night. It was their fifth straight defeat in casual softball matches between provincial government departments.

Child Welfare had lost to Highways Thursday before they went on the diamond at Beacon Hill Park.

They defaulted when less than the required seven players showed up. The rest were looking for the game — in Gordon Head.

An exhibition game was played anyway. They lost that too.

Growers, Wineries To Set Price

Negotiations between six B.C. wineries and the province's grape growers to establish a uniform price for grapes will start at Kelowna, Aug. 4, the chairman of the provincial marketing board said Thursday.

M. M. Gilchrist said in an interview he met Wednesday in the Okanagan city with representatives of the wineries and the B.C. Grape Marketing Board to "lay the groundwork" for the negotiations.

"In past the wineries have paid quite a range of prices for the same type and quantity of certain grapes," the head of the three-man government-appointed body said.

"Both the growers and the wineries now want a master contract — through this form of collective bargaining — to provide a flat rate for the types and quantities of grapes available.

Mr. Gilchrist said there are "just over 100" grape growers, located almost exclusively in the Okanagan Valley, marketing approximately 11,000 tons of grapes for wine-making this year.

Meeting Held By Datatech

The annual meeting of Datatech Systems Ltd., Saanich, was finally completed Thursday.

Two earlier meetings, in March and April, were adjourned on motions by shareholders.

New directors elected at Thursday's meeting, which was closed to the press, are: William Eastgate, managing director; Ronald Smith, vice-president and operations manager; and Gerald Cross, all of Victoria; and A. Kenneth Cooper and Robert J. Large, secretary, both of Duncan.

It was reported that steps were taken to protect a loan, standing at $602,734, made by Datatech to Can Americo Mortgage Corp. early in 1969, but Eastgate was not available today to provide any details.

U.S. Gives 8 Voodoos For Canadian CF 101s

Canada will exchange eight CF 101 aircraft for U.S. Air Force Voodoo planes. The additional planes will bring Canada's strength up to its original 66 Voodoos.

Capt. Robert Merrick, base information officer at CFB, Comox, which has about a dozen of the planes, said today the swap was negotiated because Canada needs improved interceptors. The American planes have improved low-level flying ability, greatly improved weapons firing control, and more sophisticated equipment to overcome electronic interference from invading bombers.

Merrick says the Americans want the Canadian plane because it is easily converted to the RF 101, a single-handed reconnaissance plane.

The exchange is due to be completed by the fall of 1971. About $7,000,000 will be spent for work on the aircraft, to be done at Bristol in Winnipeg, and on modernizing facilities for repair and overhaul of the aircraft fire control system. The exchange begins this month.

Canada's Voodoo interceptor planes are part of Canada's contribution to North American Air defence. Voodoos are also based at Chatham, N.B.; Bagotville and Vald'Or, Que.

Merrick says Comox, tradtionally, can expect to be the last to receive its quota of the American aircraft.

Canada will continue to pay U.S. operations and maintenance costs at some Pine Tree Line radar stations until July 31, 1971 — about $31,000,000.

Negotiations between the two countries on cost-sharing arrangements after that date are now being negotiated.

First Citizen Fund 'Not Paternalistic'

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Thursday the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs sought a grant of $230,000 from the First Citizen's Fund mainly to pay for a "structural organization with high-salaried positions indicated for a very few."

"I don't think it was the intention of the legislature to spend $1,000,000 to deliver 50 cents worth of projects," he said.

The minister, chairman of the fund, indicated that some members of the union staff would get salaries ranging between $12,000 and $14,000 a year.

The fund decided to make a grant of $53,000, but the chiefs' organization this week decided to return a cheque for $13,300, the first quarterly instalment.

They accused the government of being paternalistic and using the fund for political purposes.

CHARGE DENIED

Campbell denied this.

"There has been no paternalism of any sort," he said.

The chiefs said they sought the $230,000 for a "communication project," a study of the needs and resources of the Indian people.

Both federal and provincial governments have been unable to make adequate studies in these areas because of cultural and language difficulties, the chiefs said.

The union pointed out that the Indians themselves have given $25,000 to launch the communications program.

Campbell said the money was meant to do things that could not be done under other programs.

"As fast as individual requests for the projects have come, we have processed them," he said. "The only real limit on the amount which has been distributed has been the extent to which applications for funds have been received.

He said the fund earned last year $1,800,000 in interests from $25,000,000 banked to assist Indians of the province.

Cool-Aid Not Asked On Hostel

Cool-Aid is willing to help operate a hostel at the Bay Street Armory but it hasn't been asked, staff worker Laurie Smith said today.

Wednesday, a federal cabinet decision authorized creation of a European-style youth hostel network in armories in 13 Canadian cities. Victoria was not among them.

At a Thursday meeting of city council, aldermen decided to write Ottawa and find out why Victoria was left out.

Cool-Aid can accommodate 60 persons a night, but Smith said peak demand this summer should exceed that number.

"Kids don't care where they crash," he said, "just who runs the place." He said if the army administered the hostels, no one would sleep there.

Treasury board negotiators said no such compromise figure as 7¼ per cent had been authorized by the government. "I never even heard the figure mentioned before," said one.

The figure had been suggested to Drury by a reporter as a rough split of the difference between the wage demands of the unions and the government's counter-offer.

The unions are seeking raises that would amount to 10 per cent a year in wages and fringe benefits. The government offer is just over five per cent. Current top wage in the post office is $3.23,

PUPPET SHOW ON TAP

Coad Canada Puppets will present their new production Hans, the Mermaid's Son, at Newcombe Auditorium in the Provincial Museum Aug. 1 at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The original script by David C. Jones of San Francisco is based on a traditional Danish folk tale about a boy with incredible strength and an appetite to match.

The 16 rod puppets to be used in the show, created by Arlyn and Luman Coad of North Vancouver, are almost two feet tall. They will be operated by four puppeteers.

Graybeard Headed For Maui Victory

By PAT DUFOUR

If she keeps up her average speed, Lol Killam's Graybeard will be the first to finish the Victoria-Maui race, probably on Thursday, and also capture the most prized trophy of all, over-all winner on corrected time.

The Royal Vancouver Yacht Club entry reached the half-way mark Thursday, leading the navy ketch HMCS Oriole by 100 miles. Ralph Higgins' Gabrielle II was still in third spot, 130 miles behind the leader.

This is Killam's third try at top honors in the Victoria-Maui race and it looks as if his new boat can't miss.

On corrected time, Gabrielle II, if she also maintains her average speed, will hold her third position, but Oriole will drop to fifth, being ousted by the 35-foot cutter African Star.

FINISHING ORDER

Assuming they maintain their average speeds, other boats would finish in the following order on corrected time:

4, Aukele; 6, Porpoise III; Don Lawson's Cubana and Long Gone II tied for seventh; 9, Lucy Alice; 10, Hasty; 11, Wally Meakes' Potlatch II; 12, Celeste; 13, Whale's Tale; 14, Satin Doll; 15, Eha Makani; 16, Scotch Mist; 17, Mutineer III; 18, Drummer Boy; 19, Sabrina; 20, Puffin II; 21, Six Pack.

The Cal 30 Rasalhague has not been reporting because of radio problems but if she is anywhere near Whale's Tale, also a Cal 30, she will beat her on corrected time, having a lower Cruising Class of America rating.

Satin Doll had the best run Thursday, logging 140 miles, but boats ahead of her were being plagued with light winds.

Brian Lagden, reporting from Porpoise III Thursday, described them as being three knots and "all over the place."

18-KNOT WINDS

In contrast, boats in the rear were shortening the distance between both ends of the fleet, pushed along by 18-knot winds.

There were no takers when Six Pack sent the following message along:

"Six Pack continues to catch tuna and has invited all ships ahead of her to come alongside for dinner."

Porpoise III was unsuccessful in catching a namesake. Brian reported: "A porpoise just swam by. We tried to net him but he veered off when he heard us exclaim."

The reported position of Eha Makani may not be completely accurate for Thursday. She's having electrical difficulties and did not report, preferring to conserve power by using her radio every other day. Thursday's report is based on the visible sighting by another yacht.

The order of the boats by Thursday's check is:

1, Graybeard; 2, Oriole; 3, Gabrielle II; 4, African Star; 5, Aukele; 6, Porpoise III; 7, Celeste; 8, Cubara; 9, Hasty; 10, Long Gone II; 11, Satin Doll; 12, Potlatch II; 13, Scotch Mist; 14, Eha Makani; 15, Whale's Tale; 16, Mutineer III; 17, Lucy Alice; 18, Drummer Boy; 19, Sabrina; 20, Six Pack; 21, Puffin II.

SOMETHING WRONG —BUT NOT NUMBER

MACCLESSFIELD(England (UPI)—Pamela Whitehead arrived 15 minutes early for her new job as a telephone operator and soon was confident she had mastered the firm's switchboard.

Answering the first call, she confidently told the man on the other end, "Sorry you've got the wrong number." The man insisted he had the right one and Pamela slowly began to realize she was in the wrong office.

She said a workman had directed her to the wrong address. She was supposed to report to work at an office across the street.

Minimum Wage Urged for Police

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Chamber of Commerce says that to attract top men to the province's police and fire departments, municipalities must be willing to pay top dollars.

Among recommendations in a recent brief to the provincial government, the chamber suggests that because the job of the policeman or fireman is the same whether he is on duty in a big city or a small town, uniform minimum standards of pay should be established across the province.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows that in the case of policemen, salaries range from a high of $10,115 yearly for a first-class constable in Toronto to a low of $8,000 for the same classification in Petrolia, near Sarnia.

North Bay, which last year reported a sharp increase in crime over a period of several months, pays a first-class constable only slightly more—$8,072.

Toronto firemen also are tops on the Ontario scale at $9,900 yearly, under last year's contract. Lowest are Kingston firemen, who earn $7,540 under the 1969 contract.

A spokesman for the Police Association of Ontario said the average wage increase across the province this year was 15.2 per cent, including improved fringe benefits. He said most forces work 35 hours a week and have an hour for lunch.

The spokesman said the six-per-cent maximum annual wage federal prices and incomes commission apparently has not been followed closely in contract negotiations.

CANADA INVITED TO MAN U.S. SPACE STATIONS

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States has invited Canada to put Canadians in orbiting American space stations, Charles Drury, president of the treasury board and minister responsible for science policy, said Thursday.

He told reporters a special committee of experts is studying the offer but that the matter has not come before the cabinet.

* * *

Drury said the U.S. offered in January to have Canada join it in the design, manufacture, launching and manning of orbiting space stations.

Canadians had been asked to help man such stations or pay occasional visits to them.

Drury described the offer as "very exciting" but said the issue is large and complicated.

He said the U.S. has not asked Canada for anything in return. It was seeking an international program rather than trying to bargain.

The U.S. proposal was put forward at a meeting here last December by Thomas Paine, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

It has been under study since January by a special committee headed by Dr. D. W. R. McKinley of the National Research Council.

One informant said the committee has not completed assessment of the proposal and has formulated no proposal for the federal cabinet.

* * *

Meanwhile in Washington, Paine predicted the United States will have regularly scheduled "space shuttles" to permanently orbiting stations by 1980. He also said that although the United States at present has no plans for landing man man on Mars, it is "inevitable."

Health Issue Dodged

PREMIER BENNETT'S PLAN TO use $7 millions of a $10 millions federal centennial gift for medical research can be compared to the harried housewife who receives a broom for an anniversary gift. Like the people of British Columbia, who expect a fair proportion of government revenue to be devoted to medical research, the housewife expects a modern vacuum cleaner as a matter of course.

It appears that the federal government, in its cool reception of Mr. Bennett's proposition, feels — and rightly so — that a rich province like British Columbia should provide its citizens with adequate medical research as a matter of good government. Too bad the provincial government does not see it the same way. Although medical groups and health officials throughout the province have warned that there now exists a German measles epidemic, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark refuses to believe it. And he says the government will not conduct an immunization program for the province's 450,000 one-to-12-year-old children unless Ottawa allots $500,000 from the federal centennial fund to pay for it.

Mr. Loffmark's statement pretty well sums up B.C. government inadequacies in the health services field. And Mr. Bennett's attempt to drown his government's failure in federal largesse only makes the situation more reprehensible.

Putting aside the provincial government's attempted dodge, the question remains: how to spend the gift so as to give British Columbians something of lasting value. Suggestions are almost as plentiful as the money, including a special collection of historic material, a new structure or equipment for the University of British Columbia's health sciences complex and the often-discussed Pacific Relations Centre. Final disposition of the funds rests with the governments involved, but an international College of the Pacific has special merit in that it would benefit all Canadians, increasing our understanding of an area that may play a large part in Canada's future. Some of our Pacific Rim neighbors might even be able to enlighten the provincial government on how to fund health services.

SALT Talks Near Agreement

IF THE UNITED STATES CONtinues producing nuclear weapons at the present rate its arsenal of nuclear war-heads could number about 11,000 in the year 2,000, according to one estimate. Such awesome statistical projections seem ludicrous but the super powers' present arsenals would have seemed insane in 1950. Juggling the awful figures serves only to underline the importance of the plodding Strategic Arms Limitation Talks in Vienna.

In recent weeks the pace has picked up. U.S. negotiators have been instructed to seek a limited rather than a comprehensive agreement with their Soviet counterparts, and initially, at least, the Soviets are reported to be agreeable. As envisioned now, the agreement would entail a numerical limitation on the total number of Soviet and U.S. land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles, submarine-based missiles and manned, long-range bombers. In addition a low level of rival anti-ballistic missile installations would be permitted, which probably can be interpreted as meaning the Soviets will maintain their ABMs around Moscow and the U.S. will match it with several ABM batteries ringing Washington.

The word "limited" as attached to the U.S. proposal should be used advisedly. In fact, the suggested curbs would be the most far-reaching U.S.-Soviet arms agreement since 1946 when mutual suspicion precipitated the weapons spiral. But newer, more advanced nuclear delivery systems such as the multiple independently targeted reentry vehicles and fractional orbital bombardment system will be left to future SALT meetings. In gross numbers of nuclear warheads the United States and Soviet Union have achieved near parity. What the proposed limitations will mean in actual numbers remains secret. But any reductions will be welcomed in most world capitals. Global inflation, coupled with huge United States and Soviet balance of payments deficits may succeed in defusing the arms race more than all the moral appeals over the last 24 years.

"Remember those wonderful days dear . . . when you lost the election?"

Nixon Still Misses the Point

By
CHALMERS M. ROBERTS

GEORGE W. BALL has preferred to remain silent on the president's charge but the record speaks volumes. The amazing fact is that Mr. Nixon seemed unaware of it.

What Ball had written in the Times magazine was that the Russians "are inevitably factoring our Cambodian intervention into their continuing appraisal of America's capabilities—an appraisal that will go far to shape their planning. How do the leaders of the Kremlin view us today? To them we almost certainly appear as an angry nation, obsessed with troubles at home and a war 5,000 miles from our borders, deeply divided as to the usefulness or even the morality of that war—and therefore incapable of focusing prime attention on events elsewhere in the world. Only by assuming such an appraisal can one explain the quantum jump in Soviet adventurism in the Middle East."

Ball is a European-minded lawyer-banker. From the beginning of the Kennedy administration, he was one of those in Washington who deeply distrusted the idea of the United States getting involved in a second land war in Asia, following Korea. His role as an internal administration opponent of such an adventure began in the fall of 1961 and continued until he left government in 1968.

Warning to Kennedy

In November, 1961, after President Kennedy's Taylor-Rostow mission to Vietnam had recommended what was to be the first American escalation, Ball went to talk to the president. Mr. Kennedy was raising the number of military advisers to some 3,000 (and before he died to more than 16,000). Ball argued that to go this route would mean in five years putting 300,000 Americans into Vietnam. The president totally rejected Ball's argument.

The second great point of escalation came in 1964 and Ball once again tried to put on the brake.

He wrote a lengthy memorandum to secretaries Rusk and McNamara and McGeorge Bundy who then was President Johnson's Henry A. Kissinger. Here he cast himself in the role of America's European allies, arguing their case in which he believed so strongly. The Middle East, then relatively quiescent, figured in the oral arguments over the memo but did not appear in its written form. But the thrust was clear. Wrote Ball:

Q.: Mr. George Ball wrote an article in last Sunday's New York Times magazine section in which he suggested that the Russians were bold enough to move into the Middle East because we were bogged down in Indochina. Do you accept that concatenation of the two events?

President Nixon: Well, as a matter of fact, Mr. Smith, Mr. Ball should know something about that because he was there when we got bogged down in Indochina, as you recall, as undersecretary of state. I didn't hear his comments at that time indicating that that was the problem.—From President Nixon's television and radio interview, June 29, 1970..

"The view of many of our allies is that we are engaged in a fruitless struggle in South Vietnam—a struggle we are bound to lose. They fear that as we become too deeply involved in a war on the land mass of Asia, we will tend to lose interest in their problems. . . .

"In essence our influence in Europe depends not merely on the defence efforts we are making but on European confidence in our judgment and restraint. If we were to take any action that might be regarded as demonstrating either a lack of judgment or a lack of restraint, we would greatly undermine our European position. . . .

"The principal anxiety of our NATO allies is that we have become too preoccupied with an area which seems to them an irrelevance and may be tempted to neglect our NATO responsibilities. By and large, therefore, they would be inclined to regard the curtailment of the United States effort in South Vietnam as new evidence of American maturity and judgment than of American loss of face."

Countering 'Loss of Face'

In that last phrase Ball clearly was trying to counter what had become an obsession with President Johnson: "Loss of face" by the United States because a minor nation, North Vietnam, was able to stand off the world's strongest power.

Again Ball failed. He kept at it, however, becoming what Mr. Johnson was to call "my devil's advocate."

On June 18, 1965, Ball produced another internal administration memorandum, trying to balk a further Johnson escalation of the war. This time he argued that the United States was retracing the French pattern in Indochina and suffering the same disappointments.

He began that memo this way: "Ralph Waldo Emerson once wrote: 'Things are in the saddle, and ride mankind'." They were, indeed, but President Johnson was determined to crush the Communists.

Not until the now famous March, 1968, presidential turnaround did Ball find sufficient powerful allies to help persuade Mr. Johnson to call a halt, this time at the point where the military were asking for 206,000 more men.

Support for Ball

One such ally was the new defence secretary, Clark M. Clifford. Another was that senior statesman, Dean Acheson. Still another was McGeorge Bundy, called down from his Ford Foundation post along with other senior out-of-government statesmen.

At the White House luncheon table, Acheson gave it straight to Mr. Johnson, as has been widely recorded. Bundy summed up the view of the elder statesmen, noting that "for the first time in my life I find myself agreeing on this issue (Vietnam) with George Ball."

The tide was finally turned on Vietnam; a position was established so that a year later when Mr. Nixon became president he could begin the extraction of Americans from Vietnam.

The degree to which George Ball was responsible is hard to fix; he had fought a lone delaying action for years to no avail. Perhaps it can be said that as "devil's advocate" he at least planted seeds of doubt in the Johnson mind so that once he had massive support they were able to sprout into a turnabout decision.

European Perspective

Ball was arguing in essence, that Vietnam was unimportant strategically in terms of America's world interest. He deeply believed that this, too, was what America's allies in Europe felt was the fact.

In his television interview President Nixon argued it the other way around "You cannot separate what happens to America in Vietnam, the Mideast, or from Europe or anyplace else." To that Ball would agree. However, Mr. Nixon went on to argue that European leaders "know how much rides on the United States coming out of Vietnam, not with a victory over North Vietnam, but with a just peace." By that the president seems to mean a chance for the survival of a non-Communist regime in Saigon.

In short, President Nixon is still arguing the Johnson case—and George W. Ball is still demurring.

INVESTOR'S LAMENT

Better Off In a Bank

By JAMES H. GRAY
From Winnipeg

A SIGNIFICANT protest meeting was held here last week, but nobody burned flags, computer centres or politicians in effigy. Instead it was an assembly of what was once called "prudent investors" burning inwardly with frustration. It was the annual meeting of a small-bore financial company which had fallen on evil days because its investments had gone sour.

Gray

The meeting underlined this fact: Nobody in Canada has taken such a shellacking in recent years as investors in corporate securities. Mainly they have suffered in silence, but at the Founder Group Ltd. meet last week they found voices with which to loudly blast the management.

One of the disgruntled investors gave vent to a cry that can be heard any day in any brokerage office in the land: "They might just as well have taken your money and put it in the bank, you would have been much better off." He, in short, was blaming his company directors for not solving the modern riddle of the sphinx — how does a prudent investor find a profitable investment?

Repudiation

The comment, moreover, is the final repudiation of the oldest catch phrase of the investment business — investment in common stocks is the best available insurance against inflation. Investors are discovering there is no insurance against inflation.

The Winnipeg company in question was a locally-owned finance company which got into business in 1960, when finance companies would borrow money at 6 per cent and lend it to instalment buyers at 18 per cent. For a well-managed company, this was akin to having a license to print money.

In 1969, however, the directors decided to do some hedging against inflation and invested $1 million in common stock. They quickly turned an annual profit of $97,000 into a loss of $117,000 while their million shrank to $750,000.

If the experts can't pick them right, what chance has the small investor got? Because experience had taught them their own judgment was fallible, the small investors a few years ago turned to mutual funds. Regardless of the one he picked, the small investor's choice of mutual funds proved as unprofitable as his choice of shares on his own.

'In' Thing Out

Like the small investors, the super sophisticates of the funds of all kinds would have been better off to "leave their money in the banks" and let inflation instead of the market deflate its value.

Then there was the real "in" thing — the convertible debenture. They sold like sweepstake tickets and quickly went above the issued price. For a while. They gave an investor a good interest return, a "safe" investment and a chance to participate in the long term growth of the company.

Unhappily for the long term investors, they have lost more through downward pressure on bonds by rising interest rates than they have gained on the value of the rights to buy common stock. In fact, on most debentures investors have lost both ways. As with the other investments, the lament is the same: "I'd be better off to have left my money in the bank."

For a while it looked as if some people were making home buying a safeguard against inflation. They bought a house, lived in for a couple of years and sold it at a profit. They forthwith invested the profit in a bigger and better house with a bigger mortgage at higher interest costs.

But that didn't matter as the market kept rising. They kept buying and selling and wound up living in luxury houses with king sized mortgages at exorbitant interest rates. The depths to which the bottom has dropped out of that market is to be seen everywhere in the rash of for sale signs that now decorate the lawns of the most exclusive sub-divisions.

Real Estate Slump

After 15 years on the treadmill of "upward mobility" the real estate investors are now trying frantically to get out of big mortgages and into little ones, and discovering all the escape hatches already occupied by others with the same idea. They too are singing the refrain, "I'd have been better off with my money in the bank."

But would they? With the value of the dollar in terms of what it will buy down 50 per cent who would really be better off? As with the recently popular song, the questions can be asked but nobody answers. So the shareholders of the Winnipeg company work off their wrath on their directors. But nothing happened there either in the end. The directors were re-elected.

Try Again on Indian Policy

Toronto Star

MR. TRUDEAU runs a strange army. When it can, it advances. When it is beaten back by superior forces, it announces that there was no intention of advancing in the first place; a harmless reconnaissance was all.

The technique of marching backward while still pointing forward has its drawbacks, however. While it seems to be working in the area of tax reform, with Finance Minister Benson assuring us he meant hardly a word he said in his White Paper, the techinique has produced bitterness and misunderstanding in the case of last June's White Paper on Indian Affairs.

★

Jean Chretien, the Indian affairs minister, was still trying to advance to the rear long after it had become obvious to Canada's Indians that his new-look policy was something less than perfect. Instead of dropping the White Paper and cutting his losses, Mr. Chretien tried to keep it alive by insisting that it wasn't a policy so much as a kick-off for discussion with the Indian community. Besides, he kept saying, it was a much better document than people thought. It was just that no one understood it. Mr. Chretien's real trouble, of course, was that people understood it only too well. The federal government was proposing to solve the "Indian problem" by washing its hands of it.

The Indian affairs department would be phased out; federal services to Indians would be taken over by the provinces; reservations would cease being trust lands and become simple property to be bought and sold; so far as Ottawa was concerned, Indians would become plain folks.

Quite naturally, Canada's Indian population tended to interpret the White Paper as a signal for the white man's flight from the last of his ancient obligations.

It was an ugly and unfortunate situation, and it persisted for a full year. The break came early this month when Mr. Trudeau conceded at a meeting with Indian leaders in Ottawa that some of the White Paper's ideas were naive and that some may be misguided and short-sighted.

★

The Prime Minister at least appeared to be sounding a genuine retreat after months of advancing backward, and the result was a dramatic change of mood among many Indians. David Ahenakew, president of the Saskatchewan Indian Association, said later that "for the first time the Prime Minister has really heard the Indians."

We'll soon know if he has, in fact, been listening. The test will be whether the government continues to insist on presenting Indians with white man's solutions to their problems—to be followed by appropriate consultations, naturally—or whether it is willing at last to sit down with Indian leaders and start looking for solutions together.

If Ottawa does decide on genuine consultation, it will mean turning a fresh page in Canadian history. It deserves to be a clean page, with the mistakes of centuries decently out of sight.

★

For a start, the White Paper on Indian Affairs should be formally discarded as a white man's document. Mr. Trudeau should also consider the Indian request for a full-fledged minister of Indian Affairs, instead of one who must do double duty as minister of northern development.

Finally, the Prime Minister should ask himself whether a fresh start doesn't call for a fresh minister. It's not fair to lay the blame for an unsound White Paper on Mr. Chretien's shoulders—such policies are the responsibility of the full cabinet—but the fact remains that many Indians will continue to associate the present minister with the misunderstandings of the past year, despite Mr. Chretien's hard work and sincere efforts.

It would be easy enough for the government to make such changes, and they would show the Indian population that white society was finally ready to treat their problems as seriously as its own.

The by-law calling for the expenditure of some $75,000 to allow the B.C. Electric Railway Company to lay its wires underground, will shortly be submitted to the ratepayers. Enough Food But No Jobs

By SUE MASTERMAN

THE HAGUE — If you wish to embarass a United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) official you only have to ask him: "What were the specific achievements of the Second World Food Congress in The Hague?"

For two longs weeks last month more than 1,500 delegates from over 100 countries thrashed out suggestions for the implementation of the Indicative World Plan for Agricultural Development, the mammoth blueprint for world development from now until 1985.

The Congress was a success, claim the organizers and many of the delegates. But what have they achieved?

On the shoulders of these delegates rested the responsibility of preventing the 2.5 billion people who, according to the statisticians, will populate the earth in 1985, from living in a hell of malnutrition and semi-starvation.

But, say the experts, there will be enough food to go round; this is the great achievement — the green, green revolution — of the FAO in the last seven years. The development of new types of grain and rice, and the fertilizers to stimulate their growth, has made the feeding of the expanding world population theoretically possible.

The food will be there, but with a population growth of 2.5 to 3 per cent per year in the developing countries there will not be enough jobs to go round.

The hardest hit will be the already-impoverished small farmers. Desperate country-dwellers will pack their bags and head for the big city and slums. Without jobs the vast majority of the population will not be able to pay for the food that is available.

While the developing countries slide slowly downhill because their trade development cannot keep pace with the inflation of prices in the industrial countries, the rich lands will get richer. There the demand will be for better quality food, and more exotic delicacies to tickle the spoilt palates of the overfed privileged few.

The FAO called the Congress in order to obtain advice from the delegates for their future policy. The eight commissions which met to consider different aspects of the problem, varying from "mobilization of public opinion" to "private sector support" brought forward a landslide of recommendations — but did they represent the thoughts of the delegates? Or were they watered down to such an extent that they would be acceptable for the strictly non-political FAO, and completely useless for putting pressure on governments who will not carry their fair share?

The report of Commission Six, on private sector support, came within an ace of being rejected altogether. M. S. Aiyar from India, who was not afraid to put the opposition point of view at the Congress, accused the Commission's leaders of what he described as "either a Freudian slip or the deliberate watering down of recommendations." There was, he said, a striking contrast between what was said during the week-long discussions on this subject and the 37 eventual recommendations.

Three hundred young delegates, officially invited from youth movements all over the world and housed in a converted military barracks which they renamed "New Earth Village" were more to the point. "We are very much aware of the role of private industry in the developing countries," they said. "We reject it."

ANCIENT AND MODERN work together in struggle against starvation. In these fields in India's Bihar State an electric pump a mile away forces water into irrigation channels. Then farmers use cloth bag to scoop water onto their plot. Despite such efforts, the farmers with small holdings keep falling behind demand for subsistence.

One of the most positive aspects of the Congress — and there are positive aspects if you dig down far enough — is the involvement of the young delegates. FAO Director-General Addeke Boerma reserved about 20 per cent of the seats at the Congress specifically for them.

As the Congress chairman, Dutch Minister of Agriculture, P. J. Lardinois, said at a press conference after the closing ceremony: "I'm glad that this has been a Congress where the young people have been inside taking part instead of shut outside guarded by an equal number of local police. The young delegates have not been able to manipulate us, but we have not been able to manipulate them. That is one of the most important results of this Congress."

The Congress has also recommended that the FAO should broaden its membership to include the Soviet Union and China, and that it should make a close study of the agricultural problems in China, since these will make up a large proportion of the world problem by 1985.

▣

There were many recommendations which hopefully urged governments to lower their defence budgets and raise their aid. The whole 130-strong U.S. delegation appealed to the people and government of the United States for a concerted effort to tackle the hunger problem. The complete budget of the FAO each year, said Addeke Boerma in his closing speech, is equivalent to the cost of one nuclear submarine. But armed with fists full of recommendations, he is going to ask for more.

The most important work has been done outside the Congress. Delegates from countries barely on political speaking terms have been able to exchange opinions and experience at length. Contacts have been made, and duplication of research has been avoided. The results of this Congress cannot be seen now. It will be years before the results can even be estimated — if that is ever possible.

One concrete proposal is that for a World Food Bank — great silos all around the world full of essential foods which can be used if famine or disaster strikes at random. The Dutch have offered to take the initiative in setting it up.

But before the enthusiasm has had time to fire, a political damper has been put on it by Dr. Boerma. "I do not see how we can avoid creating something where certain countries can simply dump their surplus food products instead of tackling the basic faults in their agricultural system," he said.

Many delegates left feeling dissatisfied. A two-week Congress was too much of an endurance test for many.

The next Congress, according to some, should be preceded by regional Congresses and limited to a small number of specialist delegates. This would avoid the impression which the 1,500-strong Congress gave of lumbering through the two weeks like a simple-minded dinosaur — a lot of body with very little sense of direction.

The delegates from the developing countries — renamed the "exploited countries" by the young delegates — were the most dissatisfied, in a very polite way.

A delegate from Dahomey said, slightly fatigued: "Why did they have to call the Congress here in The Hague? If only it had been held in Africa the delegates from the West would at least have caught a tiny glimpse of the circumstances we are up against. And the Congress costs would have been invested in a developing area."

Another African delegate put it rather more strongly. Looking sadly at the group of young delegates on hunger-strike — groups of five on 48-hour shifts — basking in perfect health in the sun outside the Congress centre, he said bitterly: "What do the fat Western kids think they know about hunger."

PEKING NOTES

Driver Naps on Curb During 'Oats' Stop

By NORMAN WEBSTER

(Resident Correspondent in China of the Globe and Mail)

The main means of moving food and freight into and around Peking is still by donkey or horse cart. These are generally rubber-tired two wheel jobs pulled by a pair of animals and driven by a leathery, unflappable peasant.

When it is time for oats the carts stop wherever they happen to be — on the great Boulevard of Eternal Peace, for example — and the driver sets out portable metal troughs. Then he often lies down on the pavement, pillows his head on the curb and takes a nap as bicycles, cars and trucks stream by.

★ ★ ★

When sending bulky items, through the mails, the Chinese generally don't put them in wrapped boxes. They do them up in cloth bundles.

They bring these to the post office to have verified that they are sending nothing dangerous, then are given needles and thread and proceed to sew their bundles up. The characters for the address are lettered in ink directly on to the cloth.

★ ★ ★

Because of the dust in the dry winter months every Peking store clerk and car driver has, as essential equipment, a big feather duster.

★ ★ ★

Outside the embassy of the Provisional Revolutionary Government of the Republic of South Vietnam (political arm of the Vietcong) there is a notice board with photographs. Many were taken during the visit here in October of the head of the PRG, Nguyen Huu Tho.

One shows him sitting with other Vietnamese and Chinese in a nice shiny subway car. It has double seats on one side, singles on the other and clutch bars above for standees. Peking's subway, of course, is something few Pekingese have seen.

Everyone thought it would be opened last October 1, National Day, and a few favored foreigners did get a short ride. But the beige-brown stations along the road above the route are still locked, and the nice shiny cars down below somewhere remain empty.

★ ★ ★

It is traditionally Chinese for men to wear caps inside as well as out, and very many do. At state banquets and other official functions, the soldiers attending keep their small-peaked caps with the red star in front firmly on.

★ ★ ★

Readers of the Chinese press meet a recurring frustration, as seen in the following example. Some poor and lower-middle peasants in Shansi province, north China, built an irrigation canal through the mountains. Running aqueducts across gullies and streams was particularly difficult, especially the problem of hoisting 22,000-pound conduits onto high bridge piers without any machines.

You think: How did they ever manage that? And read on fascinated as the story continues, "The headquarters mobilized the masses to think of ways and means of solving the problem. They finally worked out an easy and convenient method and succeeded in hoisting the conduits up one by one." Period.

You scream in frustration.

★ ★ ★

For what it's worth, and that may not be much: a group of diplomats in Peking were informally discussing U.S.-China relations this spring and decided that the two countries would recognize each other and exchange ambassadors within five years.

★ ★ ★

Although they are not pushed, contraceptives are on sale openly here at drugstores and drug counters. A dozen condoms cost a nickel Canadian.

★ ★ ★

Cycling home one night after six months in Peking, I saw my first and only Chinese drunk. He was on a bicycle, too, peddling slowly along, weaving from ditch to ditch, singing and making car noises. Twice he fell off with a crash, but picked himself up again and continued happily on his way.

★ ★ ★

Trade officials in foreign missions here regularly get letters that make them tear their hair. Each has his favorite story about a request for a quick rundown on the potential market for widgets in Szechwan, or some such. One Italian businessman wrote solemnly that he was convinced China would be a fabulous market for color pictures of the Virgin Mary.

★ ★ ★

Right on the edge of the diplomatic area known as San Li Tun is a slice of rural China. There are fields planted with crops and — literally right across the street from a row of embassies — a rough peasant farmhouse, a farmyard with scratching chickens and all the rest. This spring the peasant and his family were putting fresh mud on the roof to repair the ravages of winter.

More embassy construction is planned in the area, and the farmhouse will probably go before long. Too bad. Diplomats will miss the reminder of what most of China is still all about.

'Suburbanites as Hostile to City as Farmers'

By JACK ROSENTHAL

One day this year — it may already have gone by unnoticed — the United States passes a major social and political turning point.

On that day, according to census estimates, the nation's suburbs, with more than 71 million residents, become the largest sector of the population, exceeding for the first time both central cities (59 million) and all the rest of the country outside metropolitan areas (about 71 million).

●

In short order, this turning point will be translated into political power, with reapportionment of Congress and state legislatures based on the census.

The changes are awaited gloomily by the nation's big-city mayors, already disillusioned with reapportionment ordered by courts.

Legislators represent people, not trees or acres, the Supreme Court said in its historic decisions of the 1960's, and joyful urbanists proclaimed the imminent salvation of the cities.

At last, they believed, the iron grip of rural minorities on state legislatures had been broken. At last, city residents could command their rightful share of state power, concern, and funds.

They were only half right. The rural grip has been loosened. The principal beneficiaries, however, have not been cities, but suburbs. They were both the most badly under-represented in state legislatures and the fastest growing segment of the population.

The problem for cities has been that the swelling new crop of suburban legislators has generally been indifferent, even antagonistic, to the calls for help from tormented big-city mayors.

"Reapportionment has suburbanized the legislatures," says Mayor Wes Uhlman of Seattle, "and the suburbanites are as hostile to the city as the farmers ever were."

That view, repeated in Denver recently by many mayors at their annual conference, is strongly supported by a survey made by correspondents for the New York Times in every state capital.

●

At the same time, the survey disclosed, there may yet be an urban centre swirling in the heretofore non-magic lamp of reapportionment.

Once-new suburbs are growing older, more susceptible to urban sympathy and support for urban remedies. Even before reapportionment based on the 1970 census, suburban legislative power had mushroomed dramatically in every part of the country.

In state after state, rising suburban strength has meant rising opposition to legislation benefiting cities.

●

"The suburbs are where you are finding so much of the opposition to urban legislation," says the president of the Utah Senate. He cites a legislative proposal last year for an optional sales tax increase, needed by Salt Lake City for increased fire and police protection.

The bill died in committee, largely because of opposition from suburban and rural legislators.

Cities suffered a parallel tax defeat in Minnesota during the 1969 legislation session. Suburban and rural legislatures combined to stop a tax proposal, arguing that the cities should raise property taxes instead.

Urban observers regard this not so much as hostility as apathy and ignorance. Non-urban legislators, they argue, simply will not recognize that central city populations are aging and that older people are less able to pay property taxes.

Money is only one of the reasons evident for suburban opposition to urban aid. "What seems destined to become increasingly the gut issue is black versus white. The core cities increasingly are turning black," says Walter de Vries, Michigan professor and former state house official.

"There is latent hostility and resentment," he believes, "merely because the cities have the problems — drugs, crime, housing — and make many of the suburbs' headaches."

●

Urban supporters make precisely the same point in arguing that suburbs should be allies, not enemies, of the city. They cite aging suburban municipalities bordering major cities — in some cases now indistinguishable from the cities.

There are, in different parts of the country, signs that suburban legislators are moving toward co-operation with the cities — moving fast enough to make some authorities believe that suburban hostility is not a final result, but only a transitional stage, of the reapportionment revolution.

Such changes are the result not only of shifts in problems, but also of shifts in the type of legislators elected.

The combination of contagious urban problems and progressive suburban legislators may yet, in the view of urban authorities, vindicate the hopes expressed when the Supreme Court first ordered reapportionment.

The ultimate result may not be the salvation of the cities, but at least their strengthening.

Somebody Feathering Nest Down There?

THE NATION

It has been quietly revealed in Washington that the Defence Department is stockpiling 3 million pounds of feathers, as part of the strategic materials program to avoid shortages in the event of war.

The stash of feathers, so vital to our national defence, is valued conservatively at $12 million, but the Administration, despite pressures to balance the budget, has put an end to the reduction of the stockpile which began four years ago under Mr. Johnson. At that time some officials called the mountainous accumulation of feathers ridiculous.

The latest report on the feather situation was made by Sen. Stephen M. Young (D., Ohio), who revealed that "20,000 bags of feathers—mostly goose feathers—are bagged in 50-pound bags in defence depots and warehouses in hush-hush secret locations in various parts of the country, along with 100,000 bags of down."

Senator Young observed: "It is noteworthy that though $3 billion of tin and other material stockpiled was sold on the open market, the cost of tin, rubber and other stockpiled materials has risen despite the clamor on the part of some that throwing stockpiled materials on the market would unsettle it and cause huge losses."

Elaborating on the logistics of feather security, a Pentagon official said in a serious statement recently published in Washington: "It is important that they (the feather bags) be spread out to different warehouses. After all if the Chinese suddenly drop a bomb, we might lose all our feathers at once."

So far President Nixon has done nothing to reduce the national stockpile of feathers, or other stockpiled items for that matter, stored in warehouses throughout the nation and costing the taxpayer more than $17 billion. The storage charges alone run to about $14 million a year.

The schemes of the Pentagon are long, deep and devious, and as to feathers a layman can only speculate. Icarus comes to mind, as does the aboriginal shaman. Feathers cause allergies, and induce severe retching when applied to the soft palate (international strictures on chemical warfare do not ban feathers).

Normally, we do not ask to sit in on the games the War College plays, but feathers tickle our curiousity, and since the public has been made to buy $12 million worth of them, we make bold to ask that the military raise at least a small corner of this gossamer curtain.

Arctic Ship Sets Sail For Three-Month Cruise

By PAT DUFOUR

The Victoria office of the Canadian Hydrographic Service began a five-year plan for the Western Arctic today when the CSS Parizeau slipped her lines and set to sea with the Halifax-based CSS Baffin.

Heading a team of 11 aboard the local ship is chief hydrographer Stan Huggett, committed to a concentrated probing of the seabed until the ship returns to Victoria Oct. 1.

Huggett says this will be the first of five seasons in which the local office will find the answers to some of the questions being asked by oil companies eager to develop the north. The findings of Huggett's team will provide vital clues for future drilling and the charts by which huge tankers will be able to sail in safety.

FIRST TRIP

This will be the first trip to the Arctic for Parizeau's skipper, Capt. Colin Angus, and his ship. Built at Burrard Dry Dock in 1967, she has spent the last three years working off the west coast of Vancouver Island and in the Gulf of Georgia.

She is well prepared.

"The gestation period for Arctic exploration has been a long one, dating back to 1960. With this in mind Parizeau was designed with a specially strengthened hull."

By the time she returns to Victoria, the Parizeau will have logged at least 20,000 miles without putting in to port. Refuelling will be done by barge at Mackenzie Bay at the mouth of the Mackenzie River.

To speed up operations the Baffin and the Parizeau will work together until the CSS Hudson and Baffin take off for the Northwest Passage en route back to Halifax. The two east-coast ships will be in a convoy that includes the American tanker Manhattan, the Labrador and the John A. MacDonald.

This will be Huggett's second tour of duty in the Arctic.

He was first there in 1966 when he worked in the 66-foot CSS Richardson, which operates out of Tuktoyaktuk.

211 FEET LONG

The Parizeau is 211 feet and capable of much more sophisticated research.

"In the Richardson we could only take visual fixes. She had no electronic equipment, like Parizeau, for making offshore fixes."

He and Angus say hydrographers and crew members can look forward to putting in at least 16 hours of work a day, with calculations being made daily so that this trip's information will be ready for use in 1971's navigational season.

Four launches are part of the extra equipment being carried aboard Parizeau. Keeping one for standby, the other three will be used each day to take high speed soundings at 20 knots.

Parizeau will make simultaneous soundings, steaming at 15 knots.

Huggett expects to be part of "quite a traffic jam" when they reach Icy Cape in the Chukchi Sea.

"There are 46 barges and 21 tugs now being loaded in Seattle for Prudeau Bay. We expect to see them and the department of transport's icebreaker Camsell there about Oc. 16.

"If the ice is still pretty thick we'll all be using the path cut by Camsell as she punches through it."

Parizeau will concentrate on the Mackenzie Bay area this season, laying the groundwork that will allow the huge oil tankers to use the preferred Prince of Wales Straight route.

Huggett predicts that it won't be long before the major oil companies will get their wish and be able to transport their products from the Arctic all year round.

The men in Parizeau are helping the dream come true.

BOY CHARGED IN SLAYINGS

WASHINGTON (WP) — A Xerox Corporation executive and his wife were shot to death in their Fairfax County, Va., home shortly before dawn Thursday. Police charged the couple's 15-year-old son with two counts of murder.

Donald G. Tucker, 39, mid-Atlantic states personnel manager for the firm, was shot once in the chest in the upstairs hallway.

His wife, Mary J., 36, was shot once in the left temple outside the downstairs kitchen, apparently while going toward a telephone there.

Investigators said they found two bloodstained hypodermic needles in the boy's upstairs bedroom. The needles were sent to the FBI for chemical analysis. Commonwealth's Attorney Robert F. Horan said "there is no indication the boy was under the influence of drugs."

Police said no suspected drugs were found in the house.

Shortly before noon, Fairfax County police charged the couple's eldest child, Mark, a high school junior, with the killings. Juvenile-court papers allege that the youth "did unlawfully and feloniously . . . kill and murder (the couple) . . . against the peace and dignity of the commonwealth."

Chinese Free Bishop After Long Captivity

From AP-Reuters

HONG KONG (CP) — China released today Roman Catholic Bishop James Edward Walsh after nearly 12 years in captivity, but it said another American prisoner, Hugh Francis Redmond, committed suicide three months ago.

Bishop Walsh, 79, of Cumberland, Md., crossed the border into Hong Kong at dawn.

American consulate officers went to see the bishop immediately after immigration officials phoned them with news that he had walked across unannounced.

He was believed to have travelled by train from Canton.

The bishop later was taken away by ambulance for a medical check.

Bishop Walsh was unshaven and wore dirty khaki trousers and a check shirt, immigration officials said.

Bishop Walsh, a longtime missionary in China, was bishop of Shanghai when the Communists took over in 1949.

He refused to leave Shanghai and continued to hold mass for Chinese Catholics.

Eventually he was arrested in 1958 and later imprisoned for 20 years on charges of spying and espionage.

DIED ON 13TH

A New China news agency report from Shanghai, monitored here about the same time as news was received of Bishop Walsh's release, said Redmond, 50, of Yonkers, N.Y., died April 13.

Arrested in 1954, Redmond, an employee of an American import-export firm, was serving a life sentence on charges of espionage.

In the same report, New China said Bishop Walsh "confessed his crimes" while he was in prison.

"Considering his old age and ill health, China's organs of dictatorship, acting in accordance with the proletarian policy of leniency toward those who confess their crimes and severe punishment of those who refuse to do so, now showed him leniency by releasing him before his term expires," the agency said.

It said Redmond slashed his arm and wrists with a razor blade.

He was immediately given emergency treatment but died the same night from loss of blood, the agency said.

His body was cremated and his relatives were advised through the American Red Cross, it added.

Redmond had been "given the same treatment and care as the other foreign prisoners," the report added. "He was in good health and led a regular life."

TRY BUY RELEASE

Redmond's mother, Ruth Redmond, visited him three times in prison, the last time in 1963. Several years ago a fund of $1,000,000 was raised by public subscription to buy his relase, but the administrator of the fund, lawyer Sol Friedman, was unable to get anywhere with Chinese missions he visited in Europe or even to get any information about Redmond.

Two years after his arrest he was visited by his brother, Judge William A. Walsh of Cumberland. Judge Walsh said he didn't believe his brother would leave China alive.

The bishop was convicted of "crimes against the people," New China said. The report described him as a "U.S. imperialist spy."

Four other Americans are known to be in Chinese captivity, and a fifth is believed held in China.

Workers Fired

EDSON, Alta. (CP) — About 800 workers at a gas plant construction site, 52 miles north of here, were fired Thursday following a four-hour sit-down strike Wednesday. A spokesman for the men said they demonstrated to protest camp arrangements. One said American supervisors had called Canadian workers "niggers."

WINNIPEG (CP) — A legal representative for Manitoba's 3,000 Jehovah's Witnesses asked the legislature Thursday to withdraw one clause from a proposed amendment to the Child Welfare Act. Cyclists Score

WINNIPEG (CP) — In an 18-11 bipartisan vote, the Manitoba legislature's Law Amendments Committee Thursday night chose to make the wearing of safety helmets optional for motorcyclists.

It marked a victory for the motorcyclists' lobby, even though no rider was in the committee room to witness it.

Last month, with jackets displaying club crests, the motorcyclists roared up to the legislative building on their machines to protest against the compulsory helmet legislation.

Progress Noted

SASKATOON (CP) — Professor Norman Ward, co-author of a report on English and French-speaking members of Parliament, said Thursday there has been considerable change for the better since the report was prepared five years ago.

Prof. Ward, of the University of Saskatchewan, said in an interview shortly after the report was released Thursday the improvement since the interviews with MPs in 1965 was because of simultaneous translation of speeches in the Commons and committees and the use of parallel columns of French and English in reports.

EDMONTON (CP) — Two men, one a United States citizen wanted by Canadian immigration authorities, were charged with defamatory libel after police found thousands of pieces of literature Wednesday naming Prime Minister Trudeau and a city magistrate. Ian Walker, 24, of Edmonton and Alfred Allan Herzog, 35, an American who has been living in Montreal, were charged on references in one pamphlet which referred to Magistrate John Coughland and operation of the courts.

Thunderstorm Pounds Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — A heavy thunderstorm rolled over the Edmonton area Thursday evening, leaving the city with hundreds of flooded basements, several areas without power and streets blocked by flood water.

Police said they were investigating a report of a man being washed down a sewer and another of a stranded motorist abandoning his car and a child in a flooding underpass.

A police spokesman said the reports were unconfirmed but officers were investigating.

He also said police switchboards were having difficulty keeping up with calls reporting power blackouts, washed-out roads, sewer covers popping and numerous accidents.

The Edmonton weather office reported that hail accompanied the storm. Hailstones ranging from the size of grapes to walnuts fell about 20 miles north of Calgary, said a forecaster.

Housing Project for Elderly In Victoria Set by Province

The provincial government has announced a housing project for Victoria for couples over 60 years of age with an annual income under $5,000.

Minister without Portfolio Isabel Dawson's office said the project of 10 to 12 units is designed to demonstrate the advantages of home ownership on a condominium and would be financed in part by the British Columbia Home Acquisition Grants Act, a second-mortgage plan.

The B.C. Housing Management Commission, the statement continued will act as the developers and will announce specifications and call for proposals soon.

Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing, has said the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will make a first mortgage available. The project will be eligible for second-mortgage financing under the provincial Home Acquisition Grants Act.

B.C. ROUNDUP

Drug Use Climbs In Interior

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Police sought today to arrest 18 persons to close out a drug roundup in which 31 persons, including seven juveniles, have already been arrested on 47 counts of drug trafficking.

Staff Sgt. Gordon Simons of Kamloops RCMP said Thursday the soft drug problem has increased in Interior British Columbia "and if this keeps up we will have to form a special Interior drug detail."

The roundup follows two months of undercover work by two policemen, covering the Cariboo, the Thompson Valley, the North Okanagan, Kelowna, Revelstoke and Clearwater.

Ages of those arrested range from 16 to 41, most are around 20.

Police said much of the drug supply comes from Vancouver, some directly from the United States. Marijuana also is being grown in the Interior; police said they've been too busy to go into remote areas for it.

Apple Outlook Dim

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford says the outlook for British Columbia's Okanagan apple growers is far from sweet, and unless new markets are found, the situation could turn distinctly sour.

"Washington State has planted thousands of new apple trees and unless we find new markets in the Pacific Rim countries, things look far from good for B.C. apple growers," he said in an interview Thursday.

Shelford said the world apple crop is zooming and the European Common Market nations, especially, are increasing their apply crops year by year.

Cominco Cuts Lead Price

MONTREAL (CP) — Cominco Ltd. has announced that effective immediately its lead price in Canada is being reduced by half a cent to 16 cents a pound.

The price reduction followed the price cut of one cent to 15½ cents a pound by major lead producers in the U.S.

H. T. Fargey, vice-president of marketing for Cominco, said the American price reduction was "difficult to understand in light of the current world supply-demand relationship and in particular the continuing escalation of mining and production costs for this metal."

Canadian lead consumption so far this year is about the same level as it was in the corresponding period in 1969.

The price reduction by Cominco, Canada's biggest lead producer, followed a price cut in the U.S. initiated by American Smelting and Refining Co. and by St. Joseph Lead Co., the leading American lead producer.

U.S. Smelting and Refining Co. and Anaconda Co. also reduced their price of lead.

$27 Million Settlement By Texas Gulf Sulphur

TORONTO (CP) — Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. of New York and its Canadian subsidiary, Ecstall Mining Ltd., have agreed to an out-of-court $27,000,000 cash settlement for the interest held by the Murray Hendrie estate of Hamilton in the company's giant base-metal mine at Timmins, Ont.

The settlement was announced Thurslay by Royal Trust Co., trustee for the estate. The estate had sued Texas Gulf for title of property for $400,000,000 damages.

Value of the ore body, based on estimates of the quantity of its copper-zinc-silver content, has been set at $2,000,000,000.

The heir to the estate, by a 1969 decision of the Ontario Supreme Court, is retired businessman William Gilmour of Hamilton, a stepson of the late Mr. Hendrie.

He was described by business associates Thursday as "a very retiring man" interested in bird watching and color photography.

However, his position as sole beneficiary has been challenged by about 100 descendents of Mr. Hendrie's 10 brothers and sisters. They have appealed the 1969 decision.

In the meantime, money from the settlement will be held by Royal Trust.

EXPLORE TAXES

The settlement is conditional on the Hendrie estate receiving "an appropriate tax opinion" on the cash settlement from federal tax authorities.

"It is possible that the trustee may consider tax penalties to be too severe," an official of the trust company said Thursday. It was indicated that if tax factors are prohibitive, some other form of settlement will be explored.

The agreement is considered one of the biggest out-of-court cash settlements ever in Canada.

The estate included a quarter section of land north of Timmins granted to the late Mr. Hendrie in 1907 for military services in the Boer War. He died in 1914.

In June 1963, Texas Gulf acquired a two-year purchase option on the section from the estate for $18,000. The pr erty was transferred to Texas Gulf in April, 1964. The mineral body was discovered early in 1964.

The option allowed Texas Gulf two years to acquire mining rights to the estate for $18,000. If it discovered a mine, the estate was to get 10 per cent of the net profits.

The discovery touched off a staking rush and produced the wildest days seen on a North American stock market with more than 26,000,000 shares traded in one day in Toronto.

BROUGHT INQUIRY

It resulted in an investigation by the United States' Securities and Exchange Commission and led to the appointment of a royal commission by Ontario. It forced many provinces to bring in tougher securities laws.

In subsequent actions by Royal Trust before the Ontario Supreme Court it was charged that the estate had been induced to give the option "by false and fraudulent" representation. Texas Gulf argued it had not known there was mineralization on the property when it negotiated the option.

Texas Gulf confirmed the settlement Thursday and said the company will acquire all rights and title to the 160-acre tract, one of three similar tracts over which the ore body extends.

It said the purchase includes acquisition of the 10-per-cent net profits interest held by Royal Trust Co. and satisfies all past obligations to pay royalties for ore that has been mined so far.

Cornfeld Forming New Firm

LONDON (Reuters) — U.S. millionaire Bernard Cornfeld, who founded Investors Overseas Services, the world's largest mutual fund empire, announced Thursday night he is forming a new company.

His announcement came one week after he was voted off the IOS board of directors.

Cornfeld, speaking in an exclusive interview in New York for the British Broadcasting Corp.'s Money Program, said the prime aim of his new company is to assist IOS.

IOS, which he founded 14 years ago, recently went through a serious financial crisis.

Cornfeld said "the new company will be in operation very shortly."

TOKYO (Reuters) — IOS Financial Enterprises KK, a subsidiary of the world's largest mutual fund empire, Investors Overseas Services, will suspend all its operations following instructions from the parent company, a spokesman said Thursday.

The company office here will close down and all its employees will be dismissed. But it will not entirely go out of existence, he said. It will remain registered as a locally incorporated firm.

The spokesman said the move was understood to be aimed at cutting the operating expenses of IOS.

The company is licensed to engage in real estate business and at one stage sold mutual funds to foreign nationals in Japan.

The sales operations were later discontinued when the Japanese finance ministry ruled that they were against securities law.

CANADA'S population is considerably less than half that of either the United Kingdom or France but its per-capita production outstrips both countries. These charts, prepared by United Investment Service Ltd., show that Canada's population is 42 per cent of France's but its gross national product is 57 per cent of the French output; also that Canada's population is 38 per cent of the U.K.'s but its GNP is 79 per cent. Per-capita GNP in 1969 was $3,729 for Canada, $2,764 for France and $1,789 for the U.K. (CP Newsmap.)

Five-Month Boom Seen In Canadian Exports

OTTAWA (CP) — A remarkable boom in Canadian exports to Britain and the Common Market this spring is not likely to last, government officials say.

A 26-per-cent increase in sales to Britain and a 36-per-cent jump in exports to the six countries of the European Economic Community showed in figures released Thursday by the Dominion Bureau of statistics for the first five months of 1970.

It was in sharp contrast to the 12 months of last year when exports to the United Kingdom were down 9 per cent, and there was only a 1-per-cent increase in sales to the Common Market, representing the industrial heartland of Europe.

Last year was a prosperous one for industrial Western Europe, with production bouncing up 8.5 per cent in West Germany in real terms, setting inflationary increases aside. The Gross National Product of all countries rose by 6 per cent in volume alone.

But trade authorities here say domestic troubles prevented Canada from cashing in last year as it might have on Europe's prosperity.

Exports to Britain were down mainly because of British import restraints and other belt-tightening policies. But strikes in Canada were a major factor in holding exports to industrial Europe down.

There was an increase of more than 40 per cent last year in man days lost through strikes and lockouts in Canada. Major strikes hit steel, nickel, copper, Air Canada, and Labrador and B.C. shipping.

RECEIVER APPOINTED FOR McKAY-CORMACK

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court order Thursday placed McKay-Cormack Holdings Ltd. of Vancouver in receivership under receiver-manager Martin Linsley, Vancouver chartered accountant.

The order resulted from actions brought by E. C. Warner and Roma Investments Ltd., who hold debentures of the holding company.

The operating subsidiary, McKay-Cormack Ltd., which owns a Victoria shipyard, was placed in receivership two months ago when the Bank of Montreal obtained a court order in Victoria.

Squeeze Play Threat To Ottawa Oil Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal authorities are trapped in a squeeze play by rival gasoline dealers that threatens to puncture the government's half-mandatory, half voluntary national oil policy.

The oil policy, toughened up with new gasoline marketing rules just two months ago, seeks to reserve all Canada east of the Ottawa River valley for the piped product of Canadian oil wells. The Atlantic and Quebec regions and part of eastern Ontario are open to cheaper imports.

Expanding leakages of foreign-refined gasoline into the Ontario market — Canada's richest — prompted proclamation in May of the first formal controls. The National Energy Board was empowered to restrict the marketing of imported gasoline to east of the demarcation line.

Left to voluntary compliance, however, was an agreement to limit Ontario sales of gasoline refined in Quebec from imported crude oil. Some Quebec-refined imports — notably those of Petrofina Canada Ltd. and Murphy Oil Co. and its Spur outlets — continue to enter Ontario.

The revised national oil policy now is being challenged on two fronts — by the importers of foreign gasoline on one side and the Ontario refiners of Western Canadian crude oil on the other.

Bill WALKER

So, this is the era of the mod sod, the nylon shag, the green felt. Call it what you will, synthetic turf is the in-thing in the world of sport.

Oh, sure, the adjectives describing the benefits of artificial grass are already much greater than the actual results which will be attained, but these will be toned down, in time, when the full impact of the new vogue has been recorded and analyzed.

But right now, two things are certain.

The new grass, Tartan Turf, or Astroturf (there is a difference), is extremely popular with the athletes.

The claims accompanying the new turf, however, are not that popular with the medical profession.

B.C. Lions and Edmonton Eskimos were impressed with Empire Stadium's new turf (Tartan) on Monday night. There was hardly a dissenter. Only the kickers had a beef, and that came before the game.

The consensus was that the footing was wonderful, the traction excellent, and if not perfect, it was only because nobody knows what perfect really is.

And this is a similar opinion to what was noted in a recent news item.

Woody Woodward, an infielder with Cincinnati Reds, described the new turf infield in Cincinnati in glowing terms.

"Without exception, everyone, seems to like it," he stated. Woodward was speaking on behalf of the Players' Association of which he was the resident delegate, thus his statement should carry added weight.

●

There had been the thought earlier that a baseball when hit, would ricochet far more quickly off artificial turf than off normal grass, or dirt, which major league infields are composed of. And that has been borne out. However, the bounce is very true, which is not always the case on normal infields. The uncertainty of which way the ball will bounce is virtually gone. That's what the infielders like.

And if batters thought they would get more hits because the ball would zip by the infielder before he could move, this is only partly true, according to reports.

Only the hard-hit ball between the infielders is harder to flag down. The gentle tap is easier to grab. And one should compensate the other, over a period of time.

In football, or soccer, the problem appears to be of different nature.

Field-goal kickers usually scuff the turf when they use the soccer-style, field-goal approach, a la Ted Gerela of the B.C. Lions. The old turf used to give way under such an assault. The new turf won't. Thus the football players will have to kick higher. But will they kick with as much accuracy?

The old "get your knee over the ball" theory in soccer, may also take a beating, because the same principle is in effect.

Oh sure, gone will be the glory days of the mid bath, and football will lose a lot because of it. Some of the excitement will be gone. But there shouldn't be any complaints about the rain, either. Because the footing on the field will remain constant, or so it is claimed, which is more than can be said for the performers.

Can a player, baseball or football variety, "slide" on the new covering? This question will probably be debated at length, and at every game. Football players say the landings on artificial turf are harder than on ordinary grass. That's simple, because the ground is harder, and there isn't any grease on the grass to take care of that first impact.

However, Woodward reported that a baseball player could slide on the turf, and wouldn't normally come up with a "shag burn" or an "astroberry." (The Cincinnati infield has small dirt areas around the bases, whereas Houston's Astrodome has a dirt infield).

Meanwhile, the complaint from the medics was not that artificial turf wasn't really necessary. It was, especially when more than one sport is played in the same stadium, because the general condition of the playing surface would not suffer.

●

The objection was that promoters of the new turf are claiming fewer injuries with their product. And this is not yet proven, or likely to be, because it is well-known that figures can be constructed to support any hypothesis.

Rather, it was the finding of a recent symposium on athletes and injuries that there would be a different breed of injuries on artificial turf.

And the fact that there has been a reduction of knee injuries, was offset by the admission that ankle and foot injuries are on the increase.

And so, there is a question of footwear — regular gear, smaller cleats, broomball shoes? What are the best shoes to wear. Most clubs leave it up to the players.

And then the added heat on the feet may pose a problem. Ten degrees higher than normal is the usual estimate.

Which obviously brings forth the suggestion.

Now that we've got new grass, the next step is to have it air conditioned.

Kerr Eliminated From PNGA Test

SPOKANE (CP) — Jim Brady of Seattle continued his winning ways in the Pacific Northwest amateur golf championships Thursday and all the Canadian contenders were eliminated in match play.

Brady, the medal champion, knocked off Frank Scroggs of Victoria, 3 and 2, in the second round, then tripped Jim Everham of Seattle 1 up to win a berth in the 36-hole semi-finals today.

Other semi-finalists are Rick Weihe of Bellingham, Rick Carpenter of Missoula, Mont., and Pat Welch of Spokane. Brady tackles Welch in one semi-final contest.

Weihe moved into the semis by defeating Rob Swingle of Spokane, 3 and 2, and Ross Ellison of Vancouver, 3 and 2. Ellison earlier eliminated Jim McLean of Seattle, 2 and 1.

Carpenter defeated Jay Delaney of Spokane, 1 up, and then eliminated Ken Storey of Seattle, 1 up. Storey had bounced Lawrie Kerr of Victoria, former British Columbia champion, 3 and 2.

Welch defeated Doug Van De Mark of Tacoma, 2 and 1, and Scotty McEachren of Seattle 3 and 2.

In the women's division, Sheila Bentley of Vancouver was knocked out in a quarter-final match, defeated 6 and 4 by Jo Ann Washam of Auburn, Wash.

Lonsberry Earns Financial Reward

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Kings announced that left-winger Ross Lonsberry has signed his contract, with a "substantial increase," for the 1970-71 National Hockey League season.

Lonsberry, 23, was voted the Kings' most valuable player last season when, as a rookie, he led the club in scoring with 20 goals and 22 assists for 42 points. He also topped the team in penalty minutes with 118.

Carl Paces Mols

Carl Walker's bat has been ringing at a hefty clip in recent weeks, and that production is an extra dividend Molsons' manager Bill Eastgate really doesn't need, but welcomes.

Eastgate signed Walker to give the Major Men's Softball League team greater infield depth.

Walker hasn't disappointed afield, and his recent hitting is frosting on the cake for a team that is well-stocked with competent hitters.

Walker boosted his batting average Thursday, going three-for-four at the plate as Molsons moved to within two games of the league lead by blanking Langford 6-0. Walker scored one run and drove in a pair with a timely, second-inning single.

Dan Lawson and Bill James each added two hits to make it easy for pitcher Larry Jay, who blanked the last-place Langfords on three hits.

Bakers Stop Leading Labs

Victoria McDonald's Bread vaulted to within one point of Nanaimo Labatts by handing the Vancouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League leaders a 12-11 loss Thursday night at Memorial Arena.

Victoria, with a game in hand over Labs, scored three goals in the first two minutes of the third period to overcome a 9-8 Nanaimo lead and then held on for the victory.

Muzz Bryant paced McDonald's with four goals while Don McNeil, Bill Munroe, Glen Vickers and Ed Steele chipped in two goals apiece. Goalie Dave Wirtanen made 29 stops during an outstanding performance.

Terry Stocks, Bill Russell, Chuck Hardy and Garry Shires collected two goals each for Nanimo. Other Lab scorers were Larry Clarkson, Larry Biggs and Gord Osinchuk.

Nanaimo closed the gap to one goal with a minute and a half remaining but couldn't find the equalizer.

SEAL TRADERS REMAIN AT NEGOTIATION TABLE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Complicated negotiations to complete the sale of Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League to Charles O. Finley went into their second day today.

A battery of attorneys for Finley, owner of the Oakland Athletics baseball club of the American League, and for Trans National Communications, Inc., met all day Thursday and part of Thursday night without wrapping up the $4,500,000 purchase by Finley.

There was no announcement from either side, but one source said the two parties were "miles apart" when the night session ended. Outstanding club debts and certain delayed contracts were major hangups, this source said.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said in Montreal Wednesday, Finley has until next Wednesday to complete the purchase under terms of sale approval given by the league several weeks ago.

Swim Galas Attract Victorians

Three Victoria swimmers were to leave this morning for Calgary with the 30-member B.C. team to participate in the Stampede Invitational swim competition, scheduled this weekend.

Judy Thompson and Bill Mollord from the Olympians Club and Dale Long of the Juan de Fuca Cohoes are the local representatives.

The 13-year-old Miss Thompson is hoping for victory in her age class freestyle event, while Mollord (14) and Long (12) are among favorites in the backstroke.

Another Olympian Club swimmer, Mary Pat Pumfrey, also left this morning, but in a different direction.

She's going to Santa Clara, Calif., for the international invitational, one of the largest in North America.

Distaff Golf Victors

Mrs. J. Barry was the silver division winner of a medal and pin competition among distaff players at Victoria Golf Club. Mrs. V. Link and Mrs. S. Boyd were the bronze "A" and "B" division winners, respectively.

WITNESSES NEEDED . . . . . . TO PROVE JOY

Lonely Not Always Happy

HUNTINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Norm Henline calls himself just an average golfer — but he has some valuable advice for all golfers, experts or otherwise.

"When you play, make sure you take two players along," Henline says.

Henline, 50, says he shot a hole-in-one on June 30 at the Norwood Golf Club and he's the only one who knows about it — except for a motorist who saw it from his car. Henline, who usually plays alone, would like to reap the recognition and some of the rewards that go along with his accomplishment. However, he needs witnesses and he can't find the motorist who saw the ball roll into the 128-yard third hole of the nine-hole layout near here. Henline needs at least one witness, preferably two.

So he ran an advertisement in the classified section of the Huntington Herald-Press which read:

"To the gentleman who on June 30th at approximately 6:30 p.m. driving by Norwood Golf Course, talked to and saw a golfer on No. 3 tee that had just made a hole-in-one. Please contact by phone . . ."

Nobody has called yet.

"I guess my trouble is that I got too excited after making the shot," Henline said. "I was using my new clubs, too, ment."

Henline, a hardware-store manager, said there were three men in the car and one of them shouted to him from a distance to congratulate him on the eight-iron shot.

"I wouldn't know the guy if I saw him. I just hope he shows up to verify my shot," Henline said.

Grand-Slam Single Keeps Birds Happy

Admiring Hitter Loses Home Run

By The Associated Press

The longest single of Dalton Jones' career and the shortest rain delay in baseball history has combined to keep Baltimore's East Division leaders within hailing distance in the American League.

Jones delivered what appeared to be a pinch hit grand slam homer Thursday night but was credited with only a single when he passed teammate Don Wert on the basepaths. The mental blunder did no harm because three runs scored on the play and Detroit Tigers went on to whip the Boston Red Sox 7-3.

New York Yankees, in danger of having a three-run rally in the top of the sixth in Baltimore wiped out by rain, argued a halt in play long enough for a shower to blow over. They managed to get another inning in, making their rally legal and beat the Orioles 7-5 in a game ended by rain in the eighth inning.

GOT EXCITED

Elsewhere in the American League Thursday night, Washington Senators whacked Cleveland Indians 9-3; Chicago White Sox edged Milwaukee Brewers 6-5, and Minnesota wins topped California Angels 4-2. Kansas City Royals and Oakland Athletics were off.

The Tigers and Red Sox were tied at 3-3 in the seventh when Jones belted a two-out drive off the facing of the right field stands with the bases loaded. He was admiring the shot when he passed Wert between first and second and was called out on the technicality infraction.

"I was real excited about the hit," said Jones, "I was watching it and I never realized Wert was there. About half-way between first and second I came to my senses and hoped the umpire didn't see it. But he did. I've never done that before. I've never hit a grand slam either."

YANKS RALLY

The victory moved the second-place Tigers within six games of Baltimore. The Birds bowed to New York when the Yankees rallied for three unearned runs in the sixth inning—the last two on Jerry Kenney's bases-loaded single.

Cincinnati Reds and Atlanta Braves mounted big comebacks, then lost extra-inning cliffhangers in National League activity.

Johnny Bench slammed a pair of two-run homers as the Reds made up a 9-1 deficit before bowing to San Diego Padres 10-9 on Steve Huntz' sacrifice fly in the 10th inning.

The Braves erased a 6-0 San Francisco lead with one eighth-inning thrust, but the Giants rebounded to earn a 7-6 nod on Dick Dietz' run-scoring ground out in the 11th.

Elsewhere in National League play, New York Mets rocked Montreal Expos 7-1, Pittsburgh Pirates blanked St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 and Houston Astros thumped Los Angeles Dodgers 9-5. Philadelphia Phillies and Chicago Cubs were idle.

The Padres raked rookie pitching ace Wayne Simpson for nine runs in the 2 2/3 innings he lasted, but Bench's fourth-inning homer started Cincinnati on the way back and the all-star catcher unloaded his 28th homer of the season in the eighth before pinch hitter Bernie Carbo's three-run wallop tied it up.

Menne Inherits Lead With Six-Under 66

Milwaukee (AP) — Bob Menne, a second-year tour pro from Andover, Mass., fired an opening-round six-under-par 66 Thursday to take a two-stroke lead in the $110,000 Greater Milwaukee open golf tournament.

The 28-year-old bachelor eagled the 550-yard 16th and dropped in birdie putts on 4, 6, 10, 14 and 18.

Menne's 66 came early in the day. Then a brisk wind swept the 7,125-yard par 72 course and helped keep all challengers at least two strokes off the pace.

Tied at 68 were Dave Bollman, Doug Olson, former U.S. amateur champion Deane Beman, Ted Hayes, Terry Dill, Dick Crawford and Harry Toscano.

Top Canadian was Ken Fulton of Ste. Julie, Que., at 72, six strokes off the pace. Al Balding of Toronto was in at 72 while Gary Bowerman of Toronto fired a 74 and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg was another stroke back at 75.

Kermit Zarley, winner of last week's Canadian Open at London, Ont., headed a big group at 70.

Wakeham, Trapp Pressing Leader

WINNIPEG (CP) — Gary Pitchford of Toronto carded a two-under-par 70 lead after the first round of the Manitoba Open golf championship.

The 24-year-old Toronto pro, who had a sizzling 67 in his first round of the Canadian Open last week only to explode in the next round and miss the cut, put together nine hole scores of 35-35 to hold his one-stroke edge entering the second round today.

The field of 128 golfers will be reduced to the top 60 and ties prior to the final round of the 54-hole tournament Saturday.

Close behind Pitchford in the $8,500 championship were five players, including two amateurs, with one-over-par 71s.

Among those was Ontario open winner Billy Wright Jr. of Edmonton. The others were Stan Homenuik of Dauphin, Man., George Shortridge of St. Paul, Minn., and Winnipeg amateurs Greg Pidlaski and Bob Dunbar.

TWO SHOOT PAR

Three-time winner of the Manitoba Open, Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., and Bill Wakeham of Victoria posted even-par rounds and Vaughan Trapp of Victoria was all by himself with a 73.

Another Victoria professional, John Morgan stayed in contention with a 75.

Six golfers turned in rounds of 74 in the hot, muggy day at the 6,572-yard Pine Ridge Golf and Country Club layout.

The two-over-par rounds were posted by Len Harvey of Regina, J. D. Turner of Sioux City, Iowa, Bud Edwards of Winnipeg, Richard Zeigler of St. Louis and amateurs Jimmy Doyle and Barry McKenzie, both of Winnipeg.

The lack of low scores—only six golfers broke par—was no surprise to the host professional, Bill Whibley, who soared to an 81 himself.

"This is not a tough course, but the greens are tricky and it has a lot to do with ball placement," he said, referring to the difficulties a golfer could find himself in if he wasn't accurate with fairway shots.

OUTDOOR REPORT

Winds Hamper Salmon Action

By STEWART LANG

Although westerly winds have forced fishing pressure to ease up around Vancouver Island during the past few days, there are indications that some good catches of salmon await those venturing out.

Coho and spring catches are mixed in the Bamberton shore stretch of Saanich Inlet between Sandy Beach and Mill Bay. Similar returns are coming in from Indian, Cole, Misery and Pat bays as well as Willis Point and The Boulder.

Oak Bay regular Bill Best topped other anglers around that particular section of the waterfront this week with a 30-pounder caught near Trial Island.

Other good catches were noted from Chain Island and The Gap using eight to 10 ounces of weight and 80 to 100 feet of line on the early morning or evening tide changes.

* * *

Fishermen using anchovies seem to be collecting the majority of returns from Pedder Bay. Best locations are along the kelp bed to Race Rocks and in Whirl Bay, using about one pound of weight and 100 feet of line.

Up to two pounds of weight and 100 feet of line provide the best chances of success off Beechey Head, where Tom Moir landed a 31-pounder on Wednesday morning.

Other reports indicated some big springs may be lurking in the stretch of water between Secretary Island and Otter Point.

Up-Island spots where returns could increase during the weekend are Cowichan Bay, Sansum Narrows, west side of Tent Island, Porlier Pass, Thetis Island, Rainey Bay in the Alberni Canal, Little River, Bate's Beach, Comox Bar, south end of Quadra Island and near Cortes Island.

* * *

Freshwater fishing success seems to have declined all over the Island with the warm weather.

Only fair success has been reported from Shawnigan and Cowichan Lakes while a few brown trout and cutthroats have been taken from the Cowichan River.

First and Second lakes in the Nanaimo chain were designated as fair and access to the upper ones (such as Fourth), has been cut off because of the high fire hazard.

From Courtenay comes word that Comox Lake has been "hot" while Horne Lake as well as the Puntledge, Tsolum and Oyster rivers were only fair spots for trout.

NIBBLES: Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association has bought a new parcel of land to replace the facilities on Goldstream Flats, which will be purchased by the provincial parks branch as an addition to Goldstream Park . . . 164 acres have been purchased opposite the Shawnigan Lake cutoff on the Malahat . . . this new area will take in a clubhouse, rifle range, archery range, pistol range, trap and skeet layouts as well as picnicing areas . . . total cost of the multi-purpose outdoors recreation area is expected to be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Glen Smith, chief of game management in the fish and wildlife branch, says cougars will get more protection in the future . . . high time, too . . . hysterical actions in the past have made this member of the cat family virtually extinct in many parts of North America . . . deer carry-over surveys by the branch have been iompleted and indicate that a good fawn crop may be expected as a result of the mild winter . . . hunting should improve over that of the 1969 season, which followed the severe 1968-69 winter . . . yearlings, however, will be at a premium because of the poor 1969 winter.

'Peg Takes Advantage Of Ticat Experiments

HAMILTON (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers shattered a sputtering Hamilton offence before 16,150 fans Thursday night, striking for three touchdowns in one minute and 36 seconds of the second quarter en route to a 29-12 victory in Canadian Football League exhibition play.

Taking advantage of an offensive lapse by a Ticat unit comprised of second-string players, the Winnipeg defence cashed in on the breaks to rack up 21 points and overcome a 12-0 Hamilton lead to that point.

Bob Houmard, Doug Strong, Ed Ulmer and Dave Washington scored the Winnipeg touchdowns. Gene Lakusiak converted all four and added a single on a 38-yard field-goal attempt that was wide.

Veteran Willie Bethea ran for the lone Hamilton major while Tommy Joe Coffey kicked field goals of 13 and 40 yards.

VETS ARE STRONG

The Ticats held their own as long as they went with their veterans, whom coach Joe Restic said earlier in the week would probably start the season unless their ranks were drastically depleted by injuries.

But when Restic began experimenting with newcomers to the club, Blue Bomber defenders and a capable offence directed by quarterback Wally Gabler took charge. Winnipeg topped Hamilton in all offensive departments.

Vicettes Return To League

Victoria Vicettes have suffered three losses in the Senior Women's Softball League since Wednesday night—two from a committee-room decision and one by default.

The former league-leaders were suspended on July 3 for using an unsigned player in two games last week and were reinstated at a league meeting which lasted until almost midnight on Wednesday.

Vicettes were deprived of the two games in question — one against Westendale Construction and the other against Tillicum Athletic Club.

On Thursday night, Vicettes were forced to default to Sidney Sweet Hearts because players could not be informed of the league decision in time.

Vicettes now stand two points behind first-place Cablevision Juniors with three losses.

In games played Thursday, Westendale downed Tillicum 19-16 at Central Park and Tudor House downed Cablevision 12-11 at Topaz Park.

Vicettes, meanwhile, have scheduled a pair of exhibition games against Vancouver Molsons on Sunday at Royal Athletic Park at 2:30 and 6:30 p.m.

High Winds Arrive On British Scene

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (CP) — High Winds sent many scores soaring today in the British Open golf tournament.

The 6,951-yard par-72 Old Course was as fickle as usual Thursday, smiling one minute and lashing its scorpion's tail the next just in case anybody got cocky.

"You've got to watch it every minute, not only on the ground but up there in the air," Trevino said.

LEE TREVINO
. . . playing well

With most of the leaders still waiting to tee off, Ronnie Shade of Scotland became the first to finish 54 holes in par 216 over the Old Course. Shade, a former amateur champion, came in with a good 69.

The course was playing clean and dry but steering the ball through the gusts of wind put the premium on low irons over the par-72 course.

Lee Trevino of the United States, defending champion Tony Jacklin of Britain and Jack Nicklaus of the U.S. were drawn to be last out on the course. Trevino led after Thursday's second round with a 136 total. Jacklin and Nicklaus were tied at 137.

Gary Player of South Africa, twice winner of the Open, and Orville Moody, 1969 U.S. Open champion, both appeared likely to miss qualifying for the final round. Player had a disappointing 75 for a 224 total and Moody slipped to 79 for 226, 10 strokes over par.

Only the low 55 and ties are eligible for Saturday's fourth round.

COLE HAS 71

Bobby Cole of South Africa was in good position after firing a 71 for 218.

Dale Douglass of the U.S. was three over par at 219 after shooting a 73 today.

Roberto de Vicenzo of Argentina, 1967 champion, fired a 71, and stood two over par at 218.

Also at 218 were Bill Casper and Dave Love of the U.S. and Roberto Berardini of Italy. Casper and Love shot 73s today and Bernardini 74.

Don Swaelens of Belgium soared to 80 for a 224.

Trevino, after shooting a four-under-par 68 Thursday, exclaimed: "Just give me two straight 71s and I've got the championship in my pocket."

Trevino fired five birdies en route to his 68, leaving him a stroke ahead of Jacklin and Nicklaus among the 90 survivors of the original 134-man field going into the third round.

PALMER THREE BACK

Two strokes back of the leader were four Englishmen—Neil Coles, Tommy Horton, Clive Clark and John Richardson—along with Doug Sanders of the U.S. and South Africa's Harold Henning. Arnold Palmer of the U.S. and Christy O'Connor of Ireland were another stroke back at 140.

The ebulient Trevino has won his share of other titles, but this is the one he wants now—the title on the ancient Old Course where the game was born and which has become a "must" for the top Americans.

"I like it," Trevino said. "This is a course where a good shot is rewarded and a bad shot is penalized."

Trevino led a contingent of 17 Americans into the third round, knowing that a half-dozen British artisans of the sport are offering their stiffest fight in a long time.

City Booters Earn Tryouts

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Soccer Commission and all-star team officials Thursday announced a player pool from which the 16 members of a B.C. team will be picked to play in the Canadian championship tournament at Winnipeg, starting Aug. 3.

The list, restricted to amateurs and Canadian citizens, includes players from Vancouver and Victoria.

Two goalkeepers will be picked from among Greg Webber and Peter Greco of Vancouver and Graham Lee of Victoria.

Defensive players will be chosen from among Bob Hazeldine, Greg Arnett, Rusty Bruce, Neil Ellett and Jim Berry of Vancouver, and Peter Robarts and Ray Telford of Victoria.

Midfield players will come from Don Boyd, John Haar, Buzz Parsons, Lennie Brown and Larry Louie of Vancouver and Bryan Robinson of Victoria.

Forwards in the pools are Sergio Zanatta, Gary Thomson, Bruce Wilson, Robbie Goodheart, Vanni Lenarduzzi, Dan Rosengren, Steve Rogers and Victor Kodelja of Vancouver and Ash Valdal, Bob Bolitho and Jan Bentley, all of Victoria.

Coach Harry Christie said a trial game is being planned for Vancouver to help in the selection.

Midget Title To Esquimalt

Esquimalt downed Cordova Bay 9-7 Thursday to capture the Colwood and District midget girls' softball championship in the rubber game of a best-of-three series at Bullen Park.

Esquimalt forced the third game after winning 8-6 on Tuesday after Cordova Bay took the opener 7-5 Sunday.

The new champions now meet Nanaimo in the "Hub City" for the best-of-three Vancouver Island championship. Saturday's games are scheduled for 1 and 5 p.m. with a third, if necessary, on tap Sunday at 1 p.m.

Puder Sets Pace In Ogopogo Test

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP)—Gary Puder of Vancouver Golf Club fired a three-under-par 69 Thursday to take the first-round lead in the 19th annual Ogopogo Golf Tournament.

Kelowna pro Norm Reid, formerly of Vancouver Pitt Meadows, and defending champion Bert Ticehurst of Vancouver McCleery were two strokes back

Modified Challenge From Seattle Drivers

Six drivers from the Washington Auto Racing Association are expected to compete in the modified portion of a program shared with local stock cars this Saturday at Western Speedway.

Only one of the six drivers is not from the Seattle area, but drives a seattle-based modified. Jim Sisc makes his home in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

The other entries will have Joe Webby, Mac McTaggert, Gordie Stewart, Lloyd Armey and John Helgeson behind the wheels.

Although close to completion, a rebuilding job on Albert Smith's car is not expected to be finished in time for the race. Albert, who flipped the vehicle six weeks ago in Langley and left only the engine undamaged, is expected to share driving duties in the Geoff Vantreight-owned entry with veteran Al Smith.

Roy Smith, who "turned turtle" last Saturday in Nanaimo, and Barry Davies, who flipped two weeks ago, are expected to be in the starting lineup Saturday.

Time trials begin at 7 p.m. with racing at 8.

20th Straight

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Welterweight Champion Donato Paduano scored a unanimous decision over a steady Johnny Cooke of Liverpool, England, in a 10-round non-title bout Thursday night.

Labs Hand Sooke 'Double Trouble'

It was a case of "double trouble" for Sooke Hotel in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League action Thursday.

Labatts counted heavily on doubles to squelch fifth-place Sooke 4-1 at Heywood Avenue Park and vault past idle Century Inn into second place.

The Labs managed only six hits, but two were of the two-bagger variety to figure in three runs. Barry Granger's leadoff single in the first inning set up the only run that didn't require double help.

Granger's second straight hit, a leadoff double in the third, enabled him to score what proved to be the winning run. A walk, another double by winning pitcher Bob Harris and an error enabled Labs to add two insurance runs in the fifth.

Harris checked Sooke on four hits.

Ross' Single Gives Essos Second Win

Ken Ross came up with a timely single Thursday night in a Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Royal Athletic Park.

As a result, Imperial Essos claimed their second victory of the season by nudging Greaves Movers, 3-2.

After Greaves had tied the score 2-2 in the top of the seventh inning, Imperials began their winning rally.

A base-on-balls to Terry Karpiuk began the play. Ron Oloridge, who relieved Bruce Rands in the sixth, hit a grounder but Karpiuk was safe at second on the attempted forceout.

Ross then clipped out a single to left field which scored Karpiuk.

Chris Hall came home on an error for Imperials first run in the first inning and Ralph Anderson scored the second by slipping across the plate on a fly ball in the third.

AROUND OUR SHORES

Personal Notes, Too!

By PAT DUFOUR

Sailing in the Victoria-Maui race is beginning to take on the aspects of a pleasure cruise for at least two of the Victoria boats.

Brian Lagden, the Ham radio operator aboard Porpoise III, who transmits the official bulletins each evening, usually manages to send a few personal notes along as well.

One from Ralph Higgins' Gabrielle II, sent Wednesday, described how he and his crew were "enjoying a leisurely cruise and swimming in a calm sea."

That's one way of enjoying the dreaded Pacific High!

* * *

A party is being held aboard Wally Meakes' Potlatch II today. It's the birthday of Molly Meakes, who's along with her husband and crew.

It's not easy to keep things secret from the 'chief stores officer' in any boat, especially a 37-footer, but Wally and his crew managed to smuggle aboard presents and all the makings for a whoop-de-doo without Molly discovering them.

* * *

Lt.-Cmdr. Geoff Hilliard, who skippered HMCS Oriole in the 1968 race to Maui is torn between two loyalties this time.

Naturally, he's pulling for his old command and hoping that her new skipper, Lt.-Cmdr. Peter Cox, will keep out of the tentacles of the Pacific High, picking up the northeast trade winds soon.

But he also has a vested interest in Potlatch II. One of her crew members, probably the youngest in the race, is the Hilliards' 16-year-old son Jonathon.

Dave Angus is another man who's torn between two loyalties. Through the broadcasts we receive each evening, he's keeping a track of the yachts' course for the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

He has a particular interest in two of the racers. His son, Barney, is crewing in Bill Killam's Porpoise III while another son, Jack, is in there pitching aboard Don Lawson's Cubara.

* * *

While several of their members are out in the middle of the Pacific, most of Royal Vic's boating fraternity will be off on a club picnic Sunday.

Jack Todd has given permission for them to anchor at the southern end of Sidney Island. Boats will rendezvous there about 1 p.m. and, after rowing ashore, boat owners and their guests will enjoy a barbecue and program of games.

* * *

Members of the club's Cal 20 fleet may not make it in time, having plans of their own.

Beginning Saturday at 9 a.m., they will be competing in a four-race series for the Max Young Championship Trophy. The races are open to all Cal 20s in the area, including those belonging to the Turkey Head Sailing Club and the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association.

* * *

Saturday marks the beginning of two weeks' cruising for the Victoria Cruising Club.

Boats will gather at Pirates Cove on De Courcy Island, the island which was once the stronghold of the notorious Brother 12, who fled the country after three trials in Nanaimo. Claiming to be the 12th member of the White Circle of "the other world's" wise men, Brother 12 is said to have had more than 8,000 followers of his cult, most of them women.

Sunday evening about seven or eight boats will head for Newcastle Island where they will wait for favorable conditions before heading across the Gulf of Georgia. Once across the gulf, they plan to go north and make Desolation Sound their cruising headquarters.

Another batch of boats will spend the next two weeks cruising around the San Juan Islands.

Most frustrated man in the club is its fleet captain, Konrad Pass. Because of his holiday schedule he's unable to make either of the two cruises he helped organize.

Federal Cabinet Shuns Student Liberal Dialogue Bid

OTTAWA (CP) — A Student Liberal effort at dialogue with the cabinet virtually broke down this week when no cabinet ministers showed up to discuss the students' views on drug taking.

Only one elected representative of the Liberal party was present at the meeting — and he showed up late — along with seven executive assistants to cabinet ministers.

John Roberts, MP for York-Simcoe, told them he wants to see a lot more evidence about drugs and their effects before he would go as far as they recommend.

The Student Liberal brief called for free choice by informed individuals about whether to take drugs and what ones to take, including the so-called "hard" drugs of heroin and the opiates.

It backed the recommendation of the LeDain commission on non-medical drug use which called for lifting of prison sentences for drug possession and a maximum $100 fine on conviction.

"Non-medical drug use is a question of personal, individual choice," says the Student Liberal brief.

And, quoting the LeDain commission interim report, it adds:

"Canadian society must move 'from a reliance on suppression to a reliance on the wise exercise of freedom of choice' in the non-medical use of drugs."

Mr. Roberts said he cannot accept the idea that heroin should be treated exactly as tobacco, alcohol and other substances. The farthest he would go at present was the transfer of marijuana from the harsh Narcotics Control Act to the Food and Drugs Act as recommended by the Le Dain commission.

This the government had agreed to consider following last month's tabling of the commission report.

The Meeting That Wasn't A Meeting . . .

For a moment, it sounded like a scene from Alice In Wonderland.

Victoria Ald. Hugh Ramsay stood before Mayor Courtney Haddock and council Thursday afternoon and explained why an earlier council meeting never really occurred.

Tuesday morning Haddock convened a special council meeting in an attempt to receive approval for a compromise formula in the dispute between the city and Health Minister Ralph Loffmark over the extension of Belleville Street through the St. Joseph's Hospital site.

But the matter was tabled for discussion at a meeting of the entire council, now depleted by vacationing aldermen.

Thursday, Ramsay indicated it may be at least two months before every alderman is through with holidays. And in an attempt to re-open discussion of the proposal, he showed that the decision at Tuesday's council meeting was meaningless because the meeting took place against provisions of the city bylaw.

Among other things, the bylaw requires 24-hour notice on special meetings of council. This was not done.

COMPROMISE

As a result, council will discuss the compromise move on July 23. The city wants an agreement with Loffmark not to build on St. Ann's Academy property adjacent to St. Joseph's Hospital in return for a seven-year promise not to extend Belleville through the site.

But Ald. Harold Olafson said he doubted whether Loffmark has any intention of enlarging St. Joseph's Hospital.

"If anyone thinks that we're going to get hospital beds faster by not extending Belleville Street, he's chasing a dead horse," he said.

PAST EXPERIENCE

Olafson said his opinion is based on his experience with dealing with Loffmark as a member of the Royal Jubilee Hospital board.

"I doubt that he has any intention of getting on with the building of hospitals," Olafson said.

In other business, Ramsay commended Saanich council for agreeing to study Muncipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell's suggestion that Greater Victoria municipalities co-ordinate police, fire, assessment and other services.

Haddock said Campbell's proposal is still a priority issue in Victoria.

"Personally, my feeling is to work to amalgamate with Oak Bay first," Haddock said. "This would give us experience that would be more fruitful in negoating with the other municipalities."

But Ramsay said talk of amalgamation with Oak Bay is irrelevant at this time. Haddock agreed.

Council also decided to send a letter to Tally-Ho Sightseeing Co. Ltd. informing it any further complaints on violations in its operations would mean removal of the Tally-Hos.

Moorage Fee Considered For Victoria

Visitors to Victoria soon may have to pay to moor their yachts at wharves in Inner Harbor.

At a meeting of city council Thursday Mayor Courtney Haddock suggested charges be set for use of wharves in the harbor to offset the $3,000 it costs the city each year to clear debris.

"All public works docks along the coast charge a nominal fee for this. Anyone tied to the dock should pay," he said.

Currently, use of the docks is free for 48 hours; and the city does not supply electrical services at moorings. Electrical services are available at fisherman's wharf, but fees also are charged there.

Ald. Cecil Parrot agreed to investigate and report to council.

Psychologist Heads UBC Arts Faculty

A Victoria psychologist has been made dean of University of British Columbia's faculty of arts.

Dr. Douglas T. Kenny, 47, has been acting dean since July 1, 1969, when the former dean, Prof. John Young, was appointed chairman of the federal government's Prices and Incomes Commission in Ottawa.

Young resigned as dean in April of this year to continue his assignment in Ottawa for another year.

Dean Kenny has been a member of the UBC faculty since 1950 and was named head of the psychology department at the university in 1965. He resigned as head in 1969 to become associate dean of arts.

He attended the old Victoria College, as well as UBC. He has bachelor and master of arts degrees from UBC and a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Washington.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

FUA'AMOTU Airport, Tonga — We landed here from Suva via Fiji Airways on a sunlit morning. As I stepped down the ramp to the ground I saw that the runway of this airport was grass—all turf.

How in the world could a heavy aircraft take off from here in bad weather, when rain had soaked the turf and the grass was slickly wet? Certainly no large airplanes could use the runway in such conditions.

They do take off, however, in every kind of weather. The 36-passenger aircraft that is most often used on the Suva, Tongawapu and Apia run is a turbo prop that has no trouble getting off in any kind of weather. The runway here must be one of the very few turf runways in the world used for regularly scheduled air travel.

Research Ship Gift to Emperor

TOKYO (Reuters) — The Canadian government Thursday presented a boat for offshore research in marine biology to Japan's Emperor Hirohito, a well-known biologist, the Canadian embassy announced today.

The embassy said the gift was as a commemorative link between successive world expositions in 1967 at Montreal and in 1970 at Osaka.

The 2,350-pound boat equipped with a 120-horsepower engine and a viewing port of glass, was specially designed by Canadian marine scientists for inshore marine biology sampling and observation, it said.

Progressive Little Courtenay Beats Victoria to the Punch

By Elizabeth Forbes

Forbes

After months (perhaps I should say years) of talk between our city fathers and other interested persons, we seem no nearer an adequate convention centre than we were in the beginning.

Yet in a city like Courtenay, small in population compared with Victoria, but dedicated to co-operative efforts when it comes to town planning, a convention centre and plaza has been assured with little trouble.

As far as pertinent details are concerned, it has been done in a matter of weeks.

I was told the story when I was up that way recently. And my face was more than a little red when my informant capped his facts with the tongue-in-cheek question: "How are you getting along with your convention centre in Victoria?"

The Courtenay saga actually began to unfold when the old Riverside Hotel, at the corner of Cliffe Avenue and Fifth Street, burned to the ground.

People took a look at that choice piece of property at the city's main downtown intersection, and wondered what would happen to it.

There were all sorts of rumors — gas station, high-rise hotel, business block — none of them fitting in with the imaginative plan that was forming in the minds of a concerned mayor and aldermen and many of Courtenay's citizens.

Early in March, Mayor Hobson was ready to unveil "the plan." It presented a multi-faceted development of the Riverside Hotel property and including the pioneer Bickle Theatre building and the former Comox Logging Railway right-of-way, both adjacent to the area.

Included in the picture was a civic square, senior citizens' centre, downtown convention centre, theatre-arts complex and off-street parking for 300 to 500 cars.

"Total Community Participation" was the slogan used to launch the idea at a breakfast arranged for civic leaders and members of the business and labor communities.

Three hundred and twenty persons turned up for that breakfast, every one of them enthusiastic and ready to help.

The mayor announced that it was proposed to issue $200,000 in non-interest-bearing debentures for purchase and development of the theatre and hotel sites. The theatre would be renovated (something like our own McPherson Playhouse), and The big old building in which it is housed also developed as the convention centre. The civic square and senior citizens' centre would be constructed on the hotel lots.

Off-street parking was already assured, he reminded the gathering, through the foresight of a former city council that took up an offer of Comox Logging Company (when it phased out its logging train) to buy the right-of-way for a token sum and contract to pull up the tracks.

Mayor Hobson went to the breakfast armed with a pledge from a well-known paving company to provide materials and labor, free of charge, to pave that section of the complex.

It was expected, he said, that the provincial government would pay one-third of the cost of the senior citizens' centre.

A deadline of April 1 was set for "total community participation." A huge thermometer was set up at the main intersection. Each day it rose substantially until within six weeks it hit the top. The $200,000 was oversubscribed.

In addition local business firms came forward, without being asked, to donate materials and labor either at cost or free of charge.

While this was going on, the people of Courtenay — home owners, senior citizens and young working men and women — were going in to their city hall to personally subscribe amounts from $100 to $1.

These donations have been placed in a special fund to provide furnishings for the theatre.

Today, Mayor Hobson makes the proud boast that the complex will be completed and ready for official opening in 1971.

He's proud of the enthusiastic support he's received from businesses and citizens alike. And he makes it quite clear that when the development is completed, it will belong to the people of Courtenay.

★ ★ ★

"It is your project", he has told them on more than one occasion. "It will become a part of your parks and recreation program, of your business community. It will be managed by the people you elect to manage it."

In other words it will come under the city's parks and recreation commission.

Well! There it is! Courtenay, through the co-operative effort of all its citizens is assured of a convention centre with several interesting frills.

It can find the money for this complex in a matter of weeks and it can even predict the time when it will be officially opened. Why can't we?

Firm Develops Blanket Coverage

DETROIT (AP) — Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. says it has developed a new auto safety blanket released a split second after a collision to protect occupants of a car from being thrown out.

Firestone officials demonstrated the blanket Wednesday, calling it the firm's answer to a new federal safety standard being considered for 1973 autos. The system, under development for two years, is still being worked on.

It will cost less than $100, officials said, asserting that the blanket is a more effective safety device than air bags which also are being considered as mandatory safety equipment.

In a collision, Firestone said, the automatic system would deploy the blanket from a concealed compartment near the floor, covering the occupants up to the chest within one-thirtieth of a second. As demonstrated, the system restrained three 200-pound persons sitting in the back seat of an auto during a simulated 40-mile-an-hour head-on collision.

Firestone officials said the system is equally adaptable for use in the front seat, and that when it is activated, it does not interfere with driver vision or control.

SCHOOLS RULE OUT MINI-BIKES, KARTS

Greater Victoria school district administration announced that school grounds are out of bounds to go-karts and mini-bikes.

The administration was concerned the machines could pose a safety hazard or cause property damage, such as tearing up ground, if allowed on school premises.

Saanich Police Chief Bert Pearson said officers have always checked school grounds for youngsters driving small machines like go-karts and motorcycles.

Cabinet Heads for Boondocks

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and his 29 ministers will be travelling more, especially to out-of-the-way places.

Mr. Trudeau has made tentative plans to visit northern British Columbia in early August. He hopes to tour some region of Quebec and some part of the Maritimes this fall.

The cabinet has approved a request of the Liberal Federation for each minister to make a two-day tour outside the major population centres over and above his normal round of speaking engagements.

That's going to be a lot of talking. In the first three months of this year, cabinet ministers undertook a total of 221 speaking engagements in every province, the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

After its troubles surrounding release of the Le Dain report on drug abuse, the cabinet may make all such reports public the minute it gets its hands on them.

The Le Dain report leaked before the government could make it public. As a result, a Commons committee is going to study in the fall what to do about such problems.

In the past, the government has usually been expected to have a statement ready on its views on the recommendations of special inquiries at the same time as it makes public the reports of these inquiries.

However, Justice Minister John Turner made public in late June the report of the judicial inquiry into the unlawful deportation from Canada of three U.S. Army deserters.

He said he was doing so without comment. Ministers were still studying the report, he said.

The cabinet may choose to follow this course in the future and thus avoid the risk of premature leaks. But there is nothing in the law which requires a government to make public such a report within a specified time of its receipt—or ever.

Measles Muddle

Sometimes Red Spots Can Be Terrifying to Women; New Vaccine and Tight Money Have Produced Dilemma

By DON VIPOND
An Analysis

The provincial government is in another bind on health matters — this time involving that traditional childhood malady, measles.

And an additional irony is that the bind arises from the appearance of a new vaccine which prevents one kind of measles.

The measles problem mixes emotion and money and that combination can produce clouds of confusion.

The emotion: women who contract German measles in their first three months of pregnancy stand a 50-50 chance of having their child born abnormal — deaf, dwarfed, with a malformed heart, eye disease or mentally retarded.

There aren't words to describe how a mother-to-be feels when she finds she has German measles and learns the odds against her child yet to be born.

The money: to protect pregnant women, a number of public health doctors are pushing hard for a province-wide blanket immunization of children with the new vaccine, the first step to erasing the disease.

There are about 450,000 children, aged one to 12, in B.C. The provincial government is now dickering with the two vaccine manufacturers. No one knows what the price for bulk purchase will be but if it works out to about $2 a shot, the immunization campaign would cost many times the $108,000 Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has so far pledged for purchasing measles vaccines.

The fact there are two forms of measles, two vaccines and one immunization campaign already under way isn't helping public understanding a bit.

•

There is Red measles, called Rubeola by doctors. And there is German measles called Rubella. Both are relatively mild — with the major exception of German measles affecting women in early pregnancy.

Red measles vaccine has been around several years and the provincial government has been providing it free since last September. A solid start has already been made in immunizing school-age children and some of the $108,000 Loffmark has pledged will be going to buy more rubeola vaccine.

A 50-50 Chance Of Disaster

The rubella vaccine, on the other hand, is the hot new product, available in Canada for about two months. The federal government has launched an immunization program for Indian children and some of the province's medical health officers have been outspoken in demanding the same sort of attack — immunization of all children.

They argue the only practical way to protect pregnant women is to wipe out the disease. And the only way to do that is blanket immunization.

Greater Victoria's senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, has taken this stand. So has his counterpart in Vancouver, Dr. Gerald Bonham.

"The medical community has given in clear terms its best advice," says Bonham. "We have lived up to our responsibility and now it is the provincial government's responsibility. They must take the responsibility for the results of their decision."

Vancouver's health board estimates that already 200 women will give birth to deformed babies starting in November and this figure is expected to rise as a German measles epidemic continues.

There are no statistics or predictions available on how many babies deformed by German measles have or may be born in Greater Victoria.

An epidemic of German measles already here?

•

A number of doctors say yes. Loffmark says it isn't an epidemic.

An indicator: During April, May and June of this year there were 97 cases of German measles among children in the Greater Victoria, Saanich, Sooke and Gulf Islands school districts.

There were 16 cases for the same period last year.

(The four school districts have about 45,000 pupils.)

Will there be a province-wide immunization program against German measles and, if so, how complete will be the coverage?

"What we're trying to do right now is determine the facts and make a recommendation," Dr. A. A. Larsen said Thursday. He is the provincial government's expert on epidemics.

Besides haggling the vaccine price with the manufacturers, the government is asking the province's medical health officers to advise how much Rubeola vaccine they will need in the coming year.

When these figures are in, the government's consultants will make their recommendation. It will then be a decision for the politicans on how much money will be made available for the new Rubella vaccine.

"People seem to feel the issue is all black and white," said Larsen. "It's not. There are many shades of grey."

Some of the grey areas on a blanket immunization campaign:

Will parents give their permission for children to be immunized?

With even the most popular vaccines, like Salk for polio protection, acceptance was just 95 per cent by parents. Some object to immunization on religious grounds. Others are just indifferent. They never get around to signing that card their youngster brings home from school.

The government's experience has been only 85 per cent parental acceptance on some vaccine campaigns. A gap like that with the new Rubella vaccine would considerably weaken the attack to erase German measles.

Larsen notes there are different viewpoints on whether such an immunization campaign can ever be successful.

"People with much more experience than those of us here aren't convinced it will work."

But Will Campaign Really Work?

Many American states are pushing the blanket campaign hard. Australia, on the other hand, is not, he notes.

Some states have as a requirement for school attendance immunization with several vaccines. But in such cases there is always a "conscientious objector" exclusion.

"I don't think our government wants compulsion."

Larsen said any Rubella vaccine campaign would have to be sold hard.

On the face of it, there's no benefit for the boy who is immunized. It will require education to point out he will thus avoid infecting his mother, or perhaps the neighbor's wife, who might be carrying a child.

At the moment it appears as though there will not be enough provincial money for a blanket campaign.

If this turns out to be so, the government is bound to establish a priority list for who receives what vaccine is available.

Larsen suggests that girls about 11 years old will head the list because they are just reaching child-bearing age.

The vaccine must never be given to women who are or are likely soon to become pregnant. A vaccine has weakened, but live, virus and would represent the same threat to a pregnant woman as the disease itself.

For parents unwilling to await the meshing of government wheels, the vaccine is available locally under two brand names, Meruvax and Cendevax, at about $4. They should, of course, consult their doctor on the matter.

"I don't think that's an unreasonable expense for a person to undertake," Dr. John Higgins, president of the Victoria Medical Society, said Thursday.

He noted it is equivalent to the cost of a couple of cartons of beer.

"That's not bad, you know."

THIS IS IT

'Get-Away Day' Summer Madness

By Jack Scott

One of our editorial writers, a man with a forehead nine inches high and a little balloon over his head containing the work "THINK," has suggested I write about Friday. This being Friday, what could be more appropriate except, perhaps, to write about nothing?

That, you see, is what's happening to Friday. It has become the most unproductive day of the week. Absenteeism, once a Monday reaction to an over-done weekend, is now more common on Friday in anticipation of an over-done weekend.

The managers of eight Victoria firms I polled on the subject are unanimous on that score. They agree, as well, that concentration and dedication are in a progressive stage of erosion on this penultimate day of the week that leads to mid-afternoon disintegration. Item: More dishes are dropped by waitresses in the city's largest restaurant on Friday than on all the other days together.

Scott

"It's a Gazing Out The Window Day," says the manager of one of the largest insurance companies. "The atmosphere of the office is unlike any other day of the week. More laughing. More horseplay around the coffee corner. Morale is great. Business is terrible. It's the same sort of mood that you'd probably find just before a prison break. The bodies are here. The spirits have flown."

Management appears to take a fatalistic view of the unhinged Friday worker. Sales representatives, in many cases, no longer bother to sally forth in pursuit of business. Clients are very often unreceptive or downright hostile. Euphoria, it seems, is the toughest form of sales resistance.

Two law firm executives said they'd abandoned all but essential dictation on Fridays in deference to stenographers whose minds are more tuned to sun and sand than writs and torts.

"I'm a little bit restless myself," owned one. "I want to be loved," admitted the other, "so it's Never on Friday. Besides, a lot of our girls now come to the office Friday in their informal, going-away-for-the-weekend outfits. Distracting, if you know what I mean."

★ ★ ★

Purely manual workers are apt to be as helium-headed as cerebral workers, thus giving credence to the legend that automobiles assembled on a Friday are the lemons.

A sawmill operator confirms that it is the worst of all days (though Monday is a close second) for accidents. "We have a TGIF Club spirit at the mill," he said. "That's the Thank God It's Friday Club. Plays hell with Workmen's Compensation."

Friday's child is loving and giving, so the fable goes, and giving, in terms of cold, hard cash, is Friday all over.

Retail sales in every line are at their peak. More booze gurgles across the LCB counters Friday than on any other day. Bank clearings, because of the extended hours and Friday payrolls, are highest.

Brokerage houses know it as a selling day, though that's of longer standing since share-selling is a hedge against unforeseen disasters over the weekend. (Both the Second World War and the Korean War began after the week's close.)

Restaurants, which once counted Saturday as their big day, now do their heaviest trade on Mad Friday, the day that the dishes are falling.

The day may begin like every other day, but by noon on Friday the Victoria ant-hill is teeming. Everybody seems on the move.

In the office of the B.C. Automobile Association the inquiries on road reports have begun to stream in by mid-morning. Extra patrols are being assigned in the traffic division at Victoria police headquarters. It is the one day, as Sgt. Ron Bentley will tell you there, when downtown traffic can be snarled at any given time between nine in the morning and nine-thirty at night.

The local radio stations will have more listeners between five and nine this night than they will all day Monday. Seven out of every 10 cars with radios (and 93 percent of Victoria cars have them) will be getting the road and weather reports, all part of The Great Escape Syndrome.

At the Swartz Bay terminal the ferry people are braced for their onslaught. (Curious thing that none of the ferry officials can explain is that when Monday is a holiday the mass exodus for the long weekend actually begins Thursday night, even when Friday is a working day, thus suggesting that rather large numbers of Victorians are goofing off.)

"You might call it Emancipation Day," said the editorial writer profoundly when I gave him all this information and, his eyes on distant horizons, he swept back into his office, giving himself a nasty crack on the door. That's the way it is Fridays.

WORK STARTS on rebuilt sewerage outfall at Macaulay Point, Esquimalt, as dredge is moved into position. Ratzlaff Poole and Archibald, North Vancouver, will build the 6,100-foot 36-inch steel pipe outfall for the Capital Regional District for $494,000. New system will also include trunk lines leading to the rebuilt outfall. Pipe for the outfall is being shipped to Victoria where it will be welded into installation lengths, floated into position and lowered 200 feet to the ocean floor.

New Pumps Blamed For Sudden Water Curbs

Watering restrictions recently imposed by the Greater Victoria Water Board became unexpectedly necessary because two new pumps in Saanich increased consumption by 15 million gallons a day.

Mayor Courtney Haddock, who is also a member of the city's water commission, told a Thursday meeting of city council the two 200-horsepower pumps were installed to increase water pressure in Saanich by eight pounds.

NOBODY GUESSED

Haddock said no one guessed the increased pressure would raise consumption from the previous 40 million gallons a day to 55 million gallons.

The restrictions do not mean Victoria faces a water shortage this summer, he said. They will prevent a shortage.

Commission member Ald. Hugh Ramsay said the restrictions are not the result of poor planning by the water board.

"Comsumption is a difficult thing to compute. You've almost got to be a magician," he said.

And Ald. Cecil Parrott said the need for restrictions will end once the Sooke Lake dam is completed in the fall. With normal rainfall completion of the dam will increase the supply of water for Greater Victoria by 700 million gallons.

No Lounging This Summer For Part-Time Soldiers

The 175 students enrolled in a special seven-week militia course which began at Bay Street Armory Wednesday "are not around here to lie on their backsides", says their commanding officer, Maj. Ted Piete.

Piete says the students, aged mostly from 16 to 25, are well-mannered, eager to learn and work.

"Contrary to what some people think, we have not had any of the hippie element approach us."

Piete says that within a week of advertising there were 200 applicants. This has now risen to 240 but he must stay within the 175 quota.

Similar courses have been arranged across Canada as part of the federal government's plan to provide summer activity and employment for students.

ALDERMAN CHARGES:

'Gangbuster Techniques'

The lure of cheap land is causing apartment developers to use "gangbuster techniques" to crack the uniformity of residential neighborhoods, Ald. Hugh Ramsay charged Thursday.

RAMSAY

. . . fights amendment

"There is ample apartment-zoned property in Victoria without this constant infringement into residential areas," Ramsay told city council.

He said developers eye residential sites because land is cheaper there. And once an apartment is built in a single family district, more apartments and eventually commercial developments follow.

This if fine for developers, he said, but it ruins residential neighborhoods.

Ramsay was speaking against changing the city's zoning bylaw to permit construction of an apartment complex at the corner of Ivy Place and Cedar Hill Road.

PUBLIC HEARING

The bylaw amendment would lead to a public hearing. If objection at the hearing was strong, council could refuse to give final approval to the zoning change.

But Ramsay said a public hearing was unnecessary for two reasons.

First, he had a petition with the names of 196 people who opposed the project; and he claimed other petitions are still circulating.

Second, council had previously refused to grant zoning approval on the lot when a public hearing showed residents loudly opposed an earlier design for the apartments.

And he said the revised design is more objectionable to the petitioners than the first.

Aldermen Percy Frampton, Clyde Savage and Ove Witt spoke against Ramsay's arguments. And Frampton said it is more democratic to proceed with the public hearing and listen to the developer's side.

WITT SKEPTICAL

Witt said he did not believe all the signatures on the petition came from residents of the area.

"Their plan has approval of the advisory planning commission and it would be hasty to kill the bylaw amendment at this time," he said.

"I couldn't agree with you more," said Savage.

Ramsay answered that he did not understand how council could consider approval of a plan they had once refused in similar form.

He said when apartments are built in residential districts, land values and property taxes increase without real residential benefit.

Just as anyone can attend a public hearing, anyone can sign a petition objecting to proposed apartments, Ramsay told Witt.

Assistant city manager Bill Hooson today said requests for zoning changes most often come from apartment developers.

The city, he explained, cannot control apartment design, only land use.

Approval of a developer's proposal by the advisory planning commission is only a recommendation to council. Council can reject the recommendation and kill the project right there.

In this case, as Ald. Harold Olafson said at council the advisory planning commission only narrowly favored recommending approval.

Ald. Cecil Parrott then suggested the matter be referred back to the commission.

"I don't like this shilly-shallying around and passing the buck," Ramsay answered. And he moved the bylaw amendment be received and filed, effectively killing the proposal.

Ald. Tom Christie seconded. Witt, Savage and Frampton voted against the motion. Ramsay, Christie, Olafson, Parrott and Mayor Courtney Haddock in favor.

PITS LIT, LOGGERS POISED

They're Burning to Go at Sooke

The two spar trees used for speed-climbing are in place on the Sooke Flats and the pit fires for the beef barbecue were lit this morning.

★ ★ ★

All the organizers of All-Sooke Day need now is good weather and the weatherman is willing to oblige, predicting sun with possible cloudy periods for Saturday.

Last year a record 12,000 watched the logging sports which begin this year at 1:30 p.m.

Five national championships will be up for grabs when about 50 loggers compete for nearly $2,500 in prize money.

The five national events included in a field of 16 events are the springboard chop, the standing block chop, peavey log-rolling, log-bucking and speed-climbing.

The main event could be the speed-climbing championship in which the co-defending champs, Gary Johnston of Vancouver and Owen Carney of Squamish, will face world champion Dwight Carpenter of Castle Rock, Wash.

Carney recently returned from Expo '70 in Japan where he represented Canada in log birling.

Dick Herrling of Sooke will defend his springboard chop championship while Australia's Cole Shevalis will meet all challengers in an attempt to retain his peavey log rolling title.

★ ★ ★

At midnight tonight the pit fires, after burning all day, will be raked to coals and 500 pounds of beef will be wrapped in paper and wet sacks and buried to bake for 12 hours.

The green alder fires for the 1,000 pounds of salmon to be barbecued will be started Saturday morning.

Mrs. George Wiper, left, and Mrs. Thomas Holley

Sixty Year Separation Ends

Sixty years ago today, one day after their marriage in Kendal, Westmoreland, England, George and Bertha Wiper set sail for Canada.

It has taken Mrs. Wiper since that day to persuade her sister, Mrs. Thomas Holley, in Rawtenstall, Lancashire, to visit her.

"I was very timid about flying for the first time," said Mrs. Holley, who recently turned 84 and made the trip alone.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wiper settled in Victoria in 1919. Eventually the whole Wiper family emigrated to Canada, bringing with them their recipe for their Kendal mint cakes. The confection became internationally known when Sir Edmund Hillary took them with him on his Mount Everest climb.

Mrs. Wiper now lives with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. K. G. Wiper, 4655 Cordova Bay Road, where Mrs. Holley is visiting them.

Mrs. Holley leaves Monday to return to England.

BPWC Protests Proposed Tax On Scholarships

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs will ask the federal government to consider a "much higher basic exemption" than proposed in the white paper on taxation.

The resolution, passed at the biennial convention here which concluded Wednesday, did not specify what the exemptions should be.

It said, however, that the proposed schedules of tax rates would have the effect of taxing income in the lower income brackets at an effective rate of 200 per cent higher than 10 years ago.

The resolution said a person earning $4,800 in 1961 would have to earn $6,288 in 1971 to enjoy the same goods and services, because the cost of living will have risen by 131 per cent in the 10-year period.

Another resolution asked the federal government to let awards to students remain tax exempt. The Benson white paper proposed taxing scholarships, grants or bursaries received by students.

The convention also asked the federal government to delete the old age security tax of four per cent of taxable income from the income tax returns of retired persons receiving the old age security pension whose income, before basic deduction, does not exceed $4,000.

The federation decided to ask the federal consumer affairs department to enforce accurate and prominent labelling indicating phosphate content of detergents.

It also asked that the federal government set a limit on the amount of phosphate content in detergents sold in Canada.

Charlotte VanDine of Montreal was elected president.

Miss VanDine succeeds Margaret Ashdown of Toronto and will hold office for two years.

Other officers elected were: Beth Aulin of Kamloops, B.C., first vice-president; Kathleen Score, London, Ont., Ruth Adams, Victoria, B.C., and Mathilde deBonville, Quebec City, vice-presidents; and Joan Wilson, honorary secretary-treasurer.

Provincial presidents elected were: Alberta, Helen Verdin, Edmonton; British Columbia, Lois Haggen, Grand Forks; Manitoba, Jean Mitchell, Winnipeg; Newfoundland, Elizabeth Holland, St. John's; New Brunswick, Irma Webb, Moncton; Nova Scotia, Jessie Fraser, Liverpool; Prince Edward Island, Ethel J. Sutherland, Charlottetown; Quebec, Marcelle Savard, Chicoutimi; Saskatchewan, Betty Sexty, Regina.

"There were TWELVE worms in this can, and I'm not sitting down until you locate the one that's missing."

DEAR ABBY . . .

Ice Play Annoying

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband must entertain his business contacts very often. There is one couple with whom we go to dinner frequently. The wife chews ice like a teen-ager with bad manners. That is bad enough, but she'll "suck" the ice, and spit it back into her empty glass, and the sound of that ice against her teeth and back into that empty glass simply drives me up a wall. Is there any way I can let this woman know that this irritates me? I don't want to hurt her feelings. — Embarrassed.

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Does your husband buy from her husband? Or does he sell to him?

DEAR ABBY: I need your help in handling a very touchy situation. I recently visited my cousin in another state. She proudly showed me a very lovely family album which she said took her "months" to put together.

When I started to look through it, I was flabbergasted to see some pictures of our family I hadn't seen in over 40 years.

I remembered having seen them last in my mother's family album, and I recall that after a large family gathering my mother was heartsick to discover that many of her precious pictures were "missing."

Now I see the "missing" pictures in my cousin's album. My cousin's mother is now deceased and so is my mother. I know that these are the priceless pictures that were taken from my mother's album. They rightfully are mine and I would like to have them. How can I mention this without casting ugly reflections? — Nameless Naturally.

DEAR NAMELESS: You can't. Ask your cousin if you may "borrow" the pictures you want in order to have them reproduced. (Shop around for photographers who specialize in restoring and duplicating old photographs.) Then return the originals to your cousin.

DEAR ABBY: I know this doesn't rate as one of the biggest problems in the world, but if you would bring it to the attention of your readers, a lot of cab drivers would love you for it.

Many people will call a cab, and they'll leave before the cab arrives. This is discourteous and costly to the driver as it could tie him up anywhere from five to 20 minutes looking for the person who ordered a cab, but left before it got there.

I realize there are times when people have to leave before their cab arrives, but it takes only a minute to call back and cancel the cab. —Cabby.

DEAR CABBY: I'll pass the word on. But how about the person who orders a cab, is told it will be there in "10 minutes" — and after waiting 45 minutes he's so irritated he doesn't feel like spending another dime to cancel it?

CONFIDENTIAL TO "D" IN KOKOMO: A woman who constantly checks up on her husband doesn't make him more "faithful" — just more careful.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get if off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

1 cup lemon-lime carbonated beverage
1 tbsp. soy sauce
1 tsp. garlic salt

Freshly ground pepper
¼ tsp. ginger

1 tbsp dried chopped onion

Trim any excess fat from chops. Place chops in one layer in a large shallow baking dish. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over lamb. Cover dish and refrigerate lamb overnight or for several hours, turning meat two or three times.

Grill the chops over hot coals (brushing frequently with the marinade) for 8 to 10 minutes each side or until of desired doneness. (Makes six servings.)

Note: These chops may also be cooked under the broiler 6 to 8 minutes each side.

Curious Tourist Could Stump Maltwood Guides

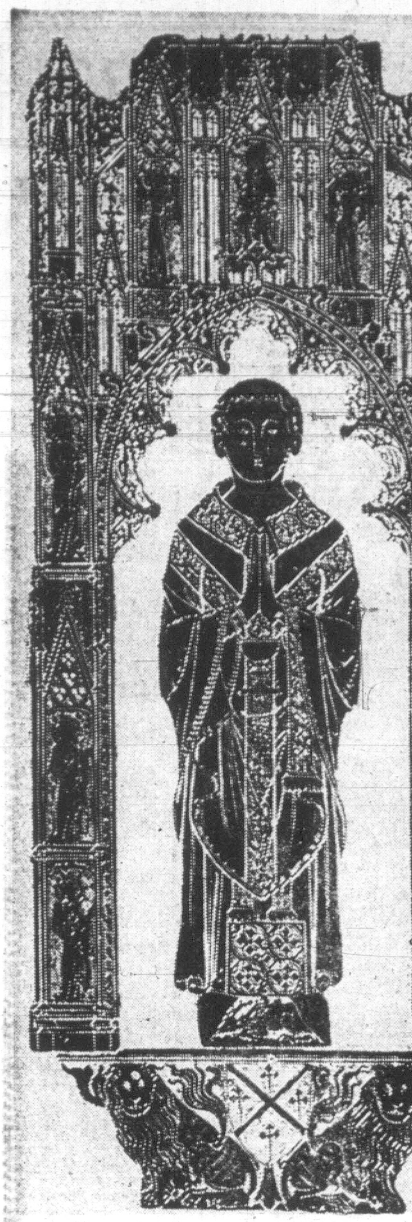
If members of the Martlet Chapter, IODE, acting as tour guides at Maltwood Museum, aren't able to answer every question about items in the collection, it isn't surprising.

It would take a very versatile art expert to appraise such widely varied items in the collection as third century Chinese figures, a 13th century Persian helmet, and 18th century English desk with a secret drawer, and stained glass windows by Frank Lloyd Wright.

The unusual assortment of objects at the museum is the result of the Catholic tastes of its most recent owners, Mr. and Mrs. John Maltwood, and now the University of Victoria.

Katharine Maltwood, an artist and sculptor, and her husband collected rare and valuable objects during their world travels.

According to the museum's "guide to tour guides," Mrs. Maltwood assembled her museum collection on the principle that all objects should be meaningful, rather than merely beautiful.



SPECIAL EXHIBIT

An added attraction at Maltwood Museum this summer is an exhibition of brass rubbings by Richard K. Morris. The illustration above is believed to commemorate William de Kestevene, a parish priest who must have been an ecclesiastic of some standing to justify such a magnificent brass. The 14th century brass is Flemish, made specially for export to England.

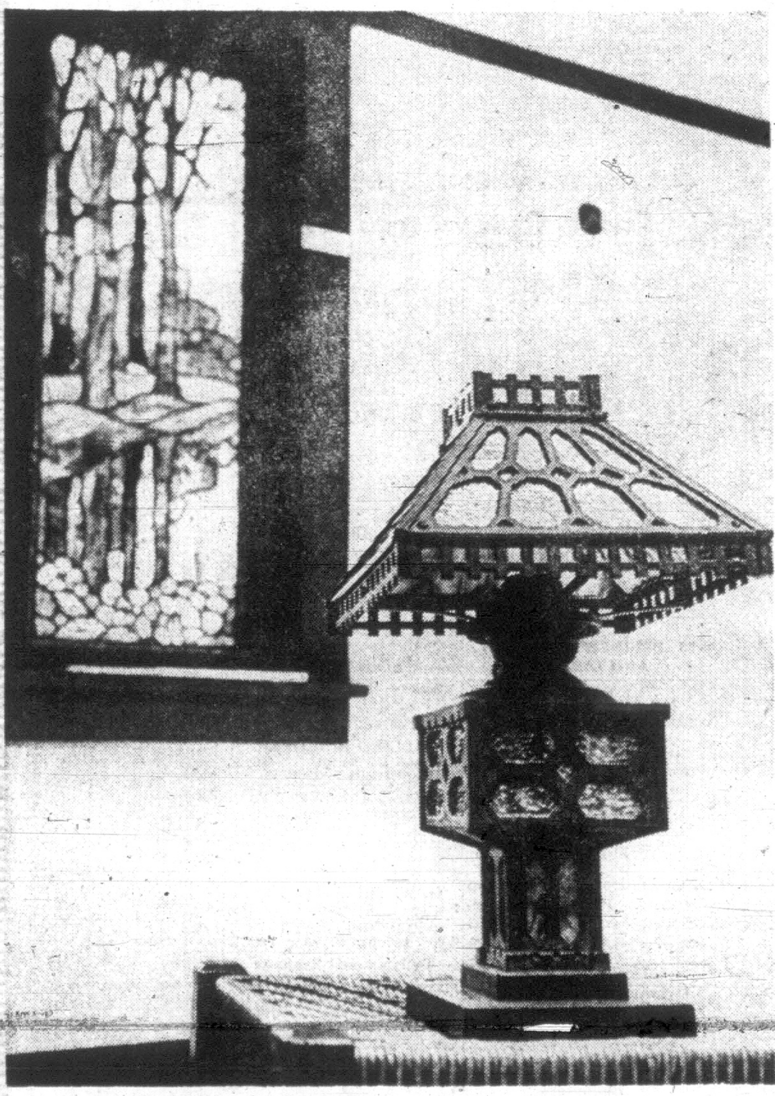
The unusual museum began as a thatched-roof restaurant, then became the private home of the Maltwoods. Pictured on the steps in front of the building, above, are Mr. and Mrs. Mark White of Seattle, who stopped to tour the museum during their bicycle tour of Vancouver Island.

At left is one of several pieces of sculpture by Katharine Maltwood in the museum gardens. Called The Path of Enlightenment, it was left to the university along with the house and collection.

The Jungman portrait of Katharine Maltwood, above, now hangs in the museum. A copy appeared in the 1907 issue of one of the leading magazines for the British arts and crafts movement.



The 13th-century Persian lamp, above, and the art nouveau leaded glass oil lamp, left, of the early 1900s, illustrate the variety and contrast of items in the Maltwood collection. Behind the heavy iron lamp is a stained-glass scene, also typical of turn-of-the-century tastes.

Maltwood is thought to be the only museum in the world dedicated to the study and exhibition of the arts and crafts movement, the term used to identify the followers of William Morris and his philosophy.

Woman Wrangler Started as Jockey

GEYSERVILLE, Calif. (AP) — After 40 years of wrangling horses, Gracie Smith can still boast: "Haven't run into anything yet I can't handle."

At 60, Mrs. Smith bosses four men as head wrangler of the Pocket Ranch, a 3,500-acre dude ranch and working cattle spread in the rugged Macademas Mountains near this small community 65 miles north of San Francisco. She if five-feet-two and weighs 115 poinds.

Her silver hair cropped close and tucked under a straw hat, Gracie ropes and saddles horses and occasionally shoes one or brands a calf.

"She's more than a wrangler, she's an accomplished horsewoman," says her employer, Warren Perryman.

Mrs. Smith raced and trained horses 30 years ago on tracks in her native Washington state, she told an interviewer.

"I did a lot of jockeying, used to rope steers, had four or five years on the rodeo circuit," she said in a western twang.

"A horse is exactly like a child," she says.

"If you let him run over you, if you don't let him know who's boss, he'll walk right on top of you to get what he wants. It's the same with kids."

Looking back, she says: "I've lived in a man's world and done a man's work all my life. Have three geldings and a stud and not a foot of land. Own a dog named Hello Dolly, a 1950 Buick, a horse trailer, two saddles, some scrapbooks. That's enough for me. Anything else is too much trouble."

Tonight's Top Television Shows

TOM JONES. 7 p.m., Channel 6. Singer-composer Joni Mitchell, Paul Anka and impressionist George Kirby are Tom's guests. Songs include Woodstock and Real Good for Free by Joni; Let It Rock, I Have Dreamed and Help Yourself by Tom; Highway in the Wind, Eleanor Rigby, and Happy by Paul; and When I Lay My Burden Down by George.

* * *

RAY STEVENS. 7 p.m., Channel 8. Tonight Ray sings Ahab the Arab, the song which first brought him to prominence in the entertainment world in 1962. He also sings Johnny B. Goode and Green, Green Grass of Home.

* * *

GET SMART. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Repeat.) Some funny moments tonight when Max becomes sound effects man on a radio station operated by KAOS. Smart and 99 manage to join the station's crew without too much bumbling, but Max's true talents emerge when the show goes on the air. For counterpoint, fat, hammy Victor Buono guests as an Orson Welles-type radio performer and he's quite amusing. 7:30 p.m. CBS.

* * *

HE AND SHE. 8 p.m., Channel 7. (Repeat.) Writers Hayward and Burns swing a neat, compact comedy out of a simple premise — the existence of an unlisted telephone number. The Hollisters foroget their new number and experience a variety of fits for fear of missing something by phone. At times, it seems as though this cast (Richard Benjamin and Paula Prentiss) an put a gloss on anything, and they do well here with the snappy dialogue provided by the writers.

* * *

NET PLAYHOUSE. "Rosmersholm." 8:30 p.m., Channel 9. (Repeat.) Dame Peggy Ashcroft is reason enough to tune in this BBC production of one of Henrik Ibsen's rarely performed tragedies. Dame Peggy is superb as Rebecca West, the enigmatic housekeeper of Rosmersholm whose insidious domination of the household and its master, John Rosmer, is remarkable for its combination of subtlety and candor. The drama itself starts out as a polemic against the social order, with the quiet, conservative, aristocrat John Rosmer taking a rebellious plunge. Unfortunately, the play soon leaves the pleasant social scene and becomes a psychological study of sick minds and desires. Whether or not this unresolved switch is Ibsen's fault or the translator's is hard to say. Nevertheless, the character of Miss West is fascinating and deserves your attention.

* * *

HOGAN'S HEROES. 8:30 p.m., Channel 7. (Repeat.) A brassy little sergeant known as the "discipline machine," becomes a martinet at Stalag 13 and makes life miserable for everyone. The story switch has the sergeant turning on his own superior officer, Klink, the blustering mouse, in the funniest sequences of the show. Another winner for Werner (Klink) Klemperer.

* * *

FRIDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9 p.m., Channel 7. "Hawaii Five-O." (1968.) (Repeat.) This well-paced film was producer Leonard Freeman's two-hour pilot for the island police series of the same title starring Jack Lord, and it's easy to see why the network bought it. As loner Steve McGarrett, Jack Lord takes on Red Chinese agents, tells off U.S. Intelligence, cuddles with cute hippie Nancy Kwan, and submits to an updated version of Oriental torture — a sort of Superman. Boss Freeman covers island beaches, docks, a cemetery view, and city streets in the plot, and his cast led by cold-eyed, effective Jack Lord makes it work.

* * *

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A wise physician is inclined to suspect some kind of nervous problem — a bad neurosis, a psychosis, hysteria, or constitutional inadequacy — when he sees a patient who has had more than five abdominal operations. He is surer of this when he learns that none of these operations ever did much good.

I remember once, at a medical meeting, being asked to discuss a patient's problem with the assembled doctors. I asked for a woman with the scars of at least six operations on her abdomen, and the interns in the big hospital soon wheeled one in for me. As I picked up her record in its aluminum binder and showed it to the audience, I remarked that one could just about make the diagnosis from the thickness of the history. The physicians understood, and chuckled; whereupon, the woman became violent; she jumped up, crying raucously that she would not be insulted, and ran from the amphitheatre. In so doing, she strengthened the diagnosis I was making of an unstable nervous system.

On looking over her record, I found that 15 years before, as a schizoid, sex-fearing girl, she had started training as a nun. But the sisters soon found her unemployable and dismissed her. With this, she began to complain so much of dysmenorrhea (pain and discomfort with menstruation), that her abdomen was explored, and bits of her ovaries were removed, together with her appendix.

Because she got worse, the surgeons felt driven to go in again and remove the uterus. Still she had so much distress that they operated again and removed the ovaries. Then she began to regurgitate her food so badly that someone removed her stoneless gall bladder. When this did no good, someone performed a gastroenterostomy (making an extra opening between the stomach and bowel). This brought on such violent vomiting that someone operated again and took down the gastroenterostomy (the stomach then opened normally through the pylorus into the duodenum the first 12 inches of the small bowel).

During the several years in which this sort of thing was going on, the woman spent most of her time as a non-paying patient in county and university hospitals.

What interested me most in the record were the statements of the surgeons, made before several of th operations. They wrote something like this: "this biologically inferior woman has had hysterical episodes in the hospital, hence, the chances of helping her are slim. But she has much pain and vomiting, and the roentgenologist thinks he can see something wrong. So, I am going to give her the benefit of the doubt, and go in again."

My impression was that if, in his college days, the surgeon had had some training in recognizing psychoses, he would have given the woman the benefit of the doubt by not operating. Regurgitation of food in a psychopathic girl is probably always functional (that is, arising in the brain, and not coming from any lesion or disease in an abdominal organ), and never helped by any operation. Also, operating on the mildly psychotic with the idea of curing their hallucinations of feeling in the abdomen is a waste of time.

All surgeons are acquainted with a certain highly nervous type of woman who seems to love operations. Sometimes she thinks she knows which organ is diseased, and she wants it fixed, or perhaps, she wants an operation to cure the terrible distress in her head, or wants an operation to show her family that she was not "imagining" her symptoms. Occasionally, a woman will take refuge in a hospital in order to get away from a husband whom she does not like.

A surgeon needs to be a bit of a psychiatrist, so as to avoid operating on highly nervous persons and persons who are poor psychic risks, and also to take care of those persons who get hysterical, maniacal, or depressed after an operation. Such things should be noted in the record to help future doctors to avoid making the same mistake of ordering an operation.

★ ★ ★

It should be noted that the person keeps begging for morphine long after the fourth day after the operation, or, that a beau who kept visiting her was much disliked by the family, that she was at sword's point with a husband or his family, or that she insisted on staying on in the hospital long after she wa told to go home. Many a time, a patient's nurse has obtained for me the secret story of unhappiness which I had suspected but could not get.

One of the problems arising from operating on a neurotic person is that, often, after even a minor operation such as that of removing tonsils or hemorrhoids, she will develop a hysterical syndrome or will go over the edge into a very trying nervous breakdown. She may try to jump out of the hospital window and commit suicide.

HOW ABOUT

HAPPY VALLEY ROAD
Like it? Well, read on. Not only is this little home on Happy Valley Road, but it has a particularly delightful quiet, treed, SECLUDED lot with a LAZILY FLOWING CREEK in front of it. The entire atmosphere is one of restfulness, contentment and peace. The home is modest but very livable. Ex-Policeman Found Guilty In Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal court jury found former assistant Seattle police chief M. E. Cook guilty of perjury Thursday on charges that he lied to a grand jury about knowledge of a police payoff and shakedown system.

The 12-day trial shook the Seattle police department as a procession of officers, tavern owners and bartenders testified to a payoff system under which officers may have received $140,000 a year for 30 years.

The city's acting police chief, Frank Moore, became ill last week and Mayor Wes Uhlman replaced him with Charles Gain, police chief in Oakland, Calif. Uhlman said Gain would be on leave of absence from Oakland until a new permanent chief can be named in Seattle.

Cook, 56, who retired in May after 29 years on the force, was allowed to remain free on his own recognizance. Sentencing was set for Aug. 10. The jury of seven men and five women got the case Wednesday and deliberated for a total of 11 hours.

QUEEN'S MESSAGE TO NORTH

'Develop, But Don't Destroy'

By GERARD McNEIL

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Queen Elizabeth ended a five-day visit to the Northwest Territories Thursday night with a pointed message on the importance of developing but not destroying the 1,300,000-square-mile area.

The Royal Family was to fly to Churchill this morning to begin a week-long visit to Manitoba, which is celebrating its centennial.

The Queen said that "thoughtless meddling and ill-considered exploitation" of northern resources can be as harmful as wanton destruction.

"In this territory, vast tracts of land and water are still unspoiled," she said. "This places a heavy responsibility upon the authorities to plan and manage its development, not just for your benefit or even for the benefit of Canada, but as a vital part in the balance of nature of the world."

Her address, made at a banquet in her honor on the eve of her departure, was broadcast from Yellowknife's Elk's Hall to the 32,000 residents of the territories. The message went out in English, three Indian languages and Eskimo. Two paragraphs were spoken in French by the Queen.

Such royal statements generally are subject to approval of the government. Sitting beside the Queen through a dinner of smoked arctic char, succulent caribou and strawberries were Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien and Territorial Commissioner Stuart Hodgson.

QUEEN RADIANT

The Queen was radiant in a diamond-and-sapphire tiara, diamond jewelry and turquoise gown. She wore, for the first time, the sovereign's badge of the Order of Canada, presented to her recently in London by Governor-General Roland Michener. Decorated with rubies, diamonds, sapphires and emeralds, it is similar in design to the badge of a Companion of the Order but somewhat smaller in size.

She smiled in delight as two Eskimos carried in a huge white polar bear rug after dinner, a gift of the Northwest Territories. Princess Anne was given 40 arctic fox furs, Prince Philip a painting by Canadian artist Robert McVittie of the entry of Sir John Franklin's two ships into the Northwest Passage, and Prince Charles a chess set of ivory figures modelled on northern animals and a soapstone board.

Aside from 11 Indian princesses, only a handful of Indians and Eskimos were at the dinner although natives dominate the territorial population.

It was a black-tie dinner, with decorations, and the guests ranged from old northern hands, in plain suits, to bemedalled military figures.

The Royal Family have travelled more than 5,000 miles since beginning the tour in Frobisher Bay, on Baffin Island, last Sunday. The visitors showed a fondness for the north's people, but in private conversations expressed concern about pollution.

SEE DEVELOPMENT

Prince Philip and Prince Charles made side trips during the week to oil exploration sites 900 miles from the North Pole on Melville Island, one of the Queen Elizabeth Islands, and the Pine Point lead-zinc mine south of Great Slave Lake, where great 250-foot-deep mining pits scar the scenery.

Prince Philip learned only Thursday, as he was about to go to Pine Point, that he was within 14 miles of a nesting area for rare whooping cranes. He chatted with interest about them with Ernie Kuyt, a federal wildlife official and authority on the cranes.

The Royal Family also saw Resolute Bay, on Cornwallis Island, and Inuvik and Tuktoyaktuk, communities on the Mackenzie delta. At Tuk, they sat in a high school gymnasium filled with Eskimos and saw a colorful drum dance.

Thursday they went to Fort Providence, a Mackenzie River Indian settlement, where they met their first blackflies—so thick the Indians were wearing head nets.

Back at Yellowknife, Charles shook hands with Laverna McMaster, 18, Cluny, Alta., winner of the Indian Princess contest. Later his mother donned a buckskin jacket over her evening gown as she went to city hall to sign the visitor's book.

She and Anne wore warm slack suits and scarves during the day and Anne wore a coral gown and tiara for the dinner.

NEED PARKAS

Their first gifts were stunning parkas, presented at Frobisher Bay, and they had to wear them almost at once for unusually chilly July weather in the Arctic. The temperature often was in the 30s and winds stiff, although weather only interfered with the schedule once—when Philip and Charles were unable to go to Eureka, Ellesmere Island.

Much of the arching route from Frobisher followed the path of the historic Northwest Passage, including that where the U.S. tanker Manhattan voyaged last summer.

Some observers have interpreted the arctic visit, first by a Royal Family, as a "show-the-flag" affair in Canada's efforts to protect the Arctic from pollution.

The Queen thanked the people of the north for "a wonderful and fascinating time" that had left unforgetable memories.

She hoped her listeners would remember that except for the competitive fur-trade days, French, English, Scots, Indians, Eskimos and Metis had worked and lived together in a difficult and dangerous environment.

"They faced the rigors of a harsh climate and natural obstacles of a new land and, under these testing conditions, only the true value of the individual had any importance. This is a lesson we should always remember."

Ceiling Placed On Farm Subsidy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has voted to limit to $20,000 annually the amoun a farmer can be paid for not growing crops. The proposal is given a good chance of becoming law.

Chief targets of the move are lush crop-subsidy payments to large corporations, banks, state governments and other giant land holders who have received individual payments of more than $4,000,000 for keeping land out of production.

The proposal would impose the limit on wheat, cotton and feed grains.

Senator James O. Eastland, who last year received $146,000 in subsidy payments on his Sunflower County, Miss., cotton plantation, voted against the measure which curbs payments to producers of wheat, cotton and feed grains.

Just a year ago the Senate refused, 53 to 34, to approve an identical subsidy limit. Spurred by arguments the program has strangled the small family farms it was supposed to help and angered city dwellers, the Senate approved it, 40 to 35, Wednesday.

The vote highlighted action on the pending agricultural appropriations bill for fiscal 1971.

APPROVAL EXPECTED

The subsidy curb is expected to win acceptance in the house which twice has passed similar measures only to see them killed in conference with the Senate.

The Senate vote was criticized by the National Farmers Organization and by Farm Bureau leaders.

"This will be detrimental to the program," said Edgar Hall of Mt. Vernon, Ill., president of NFO. "It's going to destroy a great deal of participation."

Roland Nelson, president of the Nebraska Farm Bureau, commented: "I do not believe a limitation is going to answer any of the problems that we have on the farm."

Sentor Ralph Smith (Rep.—Ill.), who introduced the measure, estimated the limit would save between $350,000,000 and $400,000,000 yearly. Only about 12,000 of the 2,500,000 farmers registered under the program now receive payments greater than $20,000 he said.

Funeral Held For Diver, Two-War Vet

Funeral services were held this morning for John Patrick "Jumper" Collins, a veteran of two world wars and one of the best-known sailors on the Pacific Coast.

Collins, who had lived here since 1924, died in Veterans Hospital Tuesday at the age of 72.

Prior to moving here, he spent 12 years with the Royal Navy.

Collins was a professional diver and worked for the Pacific Salvage Company until he enlisted with the Royal Canadian Navy in 1940 as a leading seaman diver.

His work sent him on perilous missions in seas around the world exploring wrecked ships and prowling for salvage. But his friends knew him best for the lyric Irish tenor voice which would surprise the recruits who knew him only as a raspy drill instructor in his later years as a boson's mate in Esquimalt.

He is survived by his wife Martha Jane Collins, 205-1625 Richmond, a son, Corporal John P. Collins with the Canadian army in Petawawa, Ontario and four daughters.

Former Victorian Dies in California

Former Victorian and a prominent real estate and insurance broker in Salinas, Calif., William Hiller died suddenly Monday night in hospital.

He was a member of the Masonic Lodge and the Knights of Pythias.

He is survived by his wife, Adeline, and one daughter, Mrs. John Gribaudo of Salinas.

Funeral services were held Thursday.

Police Court

A 33-year-old man who left a trail of bad cheques throughout Alberta and B.C. was remanded Thursday in provincial court to July 17 pending preparation of a pre-sentence report.

John Fitzgerald, no fixed address, pleaded guilty before Judge William Ostler to five charges of false pretences involving six counts over $50, nine counts under $50, one charge of obtaining lodging by fraud, and one speeding charge.

Eleven of the counts arose from offences in Alberta at Mayerthorpe and Calgary in which Fitzgerald obtained a total of $410.27 with bad cheques.

B.C. charges arose from offences in Kamloops, Vancouver, Colwood, Saanich and Ashcroft. They involved bad cheques worth a total of $190.50. [illegible] Fitzgerald turned himself over to Saanich police and requested that all outstanding charges be brought against him in Victoria courts.

Some of the offences dated back to November of 1968.

In an unusual move, Ostler allowed Fitzgerald to remain free on bail despite conviction on the large number of charges.

He said he had been swayed by defence counsel Ron Barber's eloquence in pointing out that Fitzgerald had showed good faith by appearing for a number of remands and waiting to face the charges.

Ostler said he would let the $1,000 cash bail stand because he was impressed that someone trusted Fitzgerald enough to put up a substantial sum.

David Sorensen, 19, of 1743 Garnet Road, was fined $300 by Judge J. A. Byers on a charge of driving a motor vehicle while his breathalyzer reading was over .08 per cent.

Court was told he was driver of a car which overturned at the intersection of Cadboro Bay and Bowker July 7.

* * *

Frank Neel, 26, of 4763 Pat Bay Highway, pleaded guilty to a charge of dangerous driving and was fined $200 and had his licence suspended.

Police said they chased his motorcycle at speeds of 80 miles per hour down Cordova Bay Road June 14.

Firemen Settlement Attempted

WASHINGTON (AP) — With strikers back on the job and rail service returned to normal, a three-man emergency board will attempt to settle a 12-year-old dispute over the use of firemen on diesel locomotives.

The board, named by President Nixon under provisions of the Railway Labor Act, will begin taking testimony in Washington July 16.

At the request of management, Nixon stepped in to end a brief walkout by 18,800 members of the United Transportation Union who went on strike against the Baltimore and Ohio, Southern Pacific and Louisville and Nashville railways Tuesday.

Fred M. Livingston, a New York lawyer, is chairman of the emergency board.

The board must submit a report on the dispute to the President within 30 days, and the union is barred from calling another strike until a second 30-day period ends.

Officers Elected

New officers were elected at the June meeting of the Victoria Camera Club.

Elected were: Dick Holden, president; Frank Turner, vice-president; David Rogers, secretary, and Mrs. Ellen Turner treasurer.

DUNCAN COLLECTOR LOSES $20 000 WORTH

3-Year Terms in Stamp Case

Two men were jailed three years in Winnipeg Thursday following a court case involving the theft of stamps from a Duncan collector.

Well-known retired Duncan lumberman, Gerald Wellburn, who attended the trial, placed the value of stamps stolen from him last Aug. 14 at $20,000.

Another collector, Sam Nickle of Calgary, told the court during the trial that over $100,000 worth of stamps were stolen from his house when he was absent last November.

Charles Roitman, 49, and Horace Mervin Lewis, 50, both Winnipeg area men, were jointly convicted on two counts of possessing a number of stolen philatelic stamps, covers and materials.

A Canadian Press report of the trial said suspicions were aroused following a sale to a North Dakota stamp dealer. The American Federal Bureau of Investigation and Winnipeg police co-operated in the investigation.

In handing down the sentences, Judge C. I. Keith said he was satisfied both men were guilty. He said they were both stamp dealers, and it is unlikely they were not aware of the value of the stamps they had purchased.

Old Locie Presented To Chemainus

CHEMAINUS — The old 1044 logging steam locomotive was officially presented to Chemainus Thursday from MacMillan Bloedel Co. Ltd.

The old locie, built in 1924 at Pittsburgh, has been entrusted to the Chemainus-Crofton Chamber of Commerce which is considering a resting place for it. It has been proposed it could become a centennial project.

In her career the engine pulled 35 logging railroad cars three times a day. She is one of the last steam locomotives and to replace her today would cost about $150,000.

Brothers Urges Cowichan To Stay With Malaspina

DUNCAN — Cowichan School Board was asked by Education Minister Brothers Thursday, to reconsider its decision to withdraw from the Malaspina Regional College at Nanaimo.

Brothers met with the trustees along with three other members of his department.

Although he said "I don't carry a torch for Malaspina," Brothers offered his services to assist in instituting negotiations with the college council.

He assured us that the government did not intend to change the 60-40 per cent cost-sharing formula and reiterated the government's position on the necessity of school board direction in control of all regional colleges," said chairman David Haywood.

After the meeting Brothers said, "We did not arrive at any firm decision. I have no power to enforce, and the new move will be up to the Cowichan school board."

Said Heywood:

'CRITICAL'

"We enjoyed hearing from the minister but we are critical of him because it took him so long to get around to talking to us.

"The board is now considering what was discussed at the meeting and I assume the Malaspina Regional College will be on the agenda at the next meeting."

Haywood said he was not sure where discussions would lead and was not optimistic that their proposals to change the cost-sharing factor would be accepted.

"We have had no indication yet from the council or participating school district that they are in agreement with our proposals."

Brothers suggested to the board it meet with the college council rather than the participating school districts as was the policy before.

"The college council always said they didn't want to get involved," stressed Haywood. "The minister seems to think they have a pretty strong voice in matters."

On May 6 Haywood announced the Cowichan school district would no longer participate in the regional college "due to the improper signing of the Malaspina Regional College agreement."

At that time Haywood said Cowichan had been actively seeking changes in the cost-sharing formula.

"In February, following discussion with the minister of education, the board notified the participating school districts of its proposal to change the sharing of operational costs. We are unhappy with the present financial arrangement but if another could be agreed upon perhaps by September we could go back in," Haywood said.

Merger Suggested In Recreation

DUNCAN — Duncan and North Cowichan municipalities will be asked to consider amalgamation of recreation and parks to be administered by a joint recreation commission.

They now each have their own recreation commission and have 37 projects they share.

The joint recreation commission is looking into the feasibility of a regional recreation director.

"Recreation organized on a regional basis isn't a new concept," G. J. Pynn, recreation consultant in the community recreation branch, Victoria, explained here Thursday.

"We are not talking about something so far out in the woods that hasn't happened before. You will see that it is the coming thing. Just by you holding a joint recreation meeting indicates that there are some areas for overlapping and mutual co-operation."

STRUCTURE FIRST

Pynn indicated it would be difficult for a director to work under two governing bodies and advised recreation members that the organization structure must come first and then administration.

"There are abundant reasons why it should work," said Charles Rowley, chairman of the joint recreation commission.

Rowley said that to "keep trying to go whole hog is like flogging a dead horse."

He was discussing the proposed swimming pool bylaw that was to be shared on a regional basis. It was defeated.

"The school board has indicated to me that they would like to see a regional district director," he said. "They already co-operate with the gymnasiums. In my opinion this is an important aspect to the hiring of a recreation director because it would bring into use hundreds of thousands of dollars of equipment that is just sitting idle."

North Cowichan Ald. Margaret Robertson said they would like to have all of their recreational facilities on a regional basis.

HOLDING TROPHY for winning the Vancouver Island championship is Rick Ledding, captain of the Duncan Babe Ruth All Stars. The team this week defeated Lake Cowichan 12 to 2 to enter the B.C. playoffs scheduled at Prince George Saturday.

SHOTGUN BLAST WOUNDS ONTARIAN

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — A 20-year-old Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. man is in satisfactory condition at West Coast General Hospital here with a shotgun wound to the lower left side of his stomach.

Ucluelet RCMP said John Angus Burns was found at about 12:30 a.m. Tuesday on Long Beach by friends. They said a 12-gauge shotgun was found nearby.

Police said no foul play is suspected and that they are investigating the details of a possible accidental shooting.

Farm Office In Duncan Shut

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Offices of the Farm Credit Corporation at Langley and Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley and at Duncan on Vancouver Island will be closed down and staff moved here, the corporation announced Tuesday.

It said the closures were for economy.

U.S. Pours $30 Billion Annually Into Vietnam

By DAN DE LUCE

Associated Press Staff Writer

Dan De Luce, an Assistant general manager of The Associated Press, in the following story tells how U.S. dollars are South Vietnam's lifeblood.

It's fantastic to see what $30,000,000,000 a year buys for the United States in South Vietnam.

You can watch $1,000,000 go bang in just one mission by B-52s. They've been flying 2,500 missions a year in South Vietnam.

The average mission consists of six Stratoforts dropping a total of 180 tons of high explosives, from six miles up.

But American dollars are South Vietnam's lifeblood in ways that go beyond the high cost of waging war with 413,900 Americans and more than 1,000,000 Vietnamese under arms.

Vietnam foreign trade? It runs a deficit of more than $700,000,000 yearly. The United States picks up the tab—all of it.

National employment? There are 150,000 Vietnamese and 20,000 "third-country nationals" on American payrolls. Together with their dependents, about 750,000 civilians. The cost is more than $400,000,000 yearly, right out of the U.S. treasury.

Every give-away program of the Saigon government is financed by the United States. The programs proliferate. Resettlement. Pacification. New Life Development. Open Arms. Land for the Tiller. Work for Peace. All are part of the political war.

Last February in North Vietnam, I saw relatively large amounts of equipment from the Soviet Union and China for repairing the road and rail communications which U.S. bombers had smashed in a four-year offensive.

ARMS IN NORTH

I also saw an array of imported armaments, at the People's Armed Forces exhibition in Hanoi, which ranged from tanks to surface-to-air missiles.

But as I know now, after touring South Vietnam, the gift of construction equipment from the so-called socialist bloc is a tiny fraction of what the United States reconstruction effort amounts to south of the 17th parallel. All the Sino-Soviet trucks, bulldozers, graders, rollers and cranes in the North, which I counted in a thousand miles of road travel, could get lost in just a corner of a U.S. supply depot at Da Nang.

Supply depots in four corps areas are stockpiled with multi-million-dollar reserves of new military and civilian equipment materails. Seaports are congested with shipping. On the docks, you see mountains of rice from Louisiana and pine lumber from Oregon, with other U.S. products.

South Vietnam imported $745,000,000 of commercial items alone in the last year. Its exports amounted to $16,000,000. The deficit, equivalent to $40 for each 17,800,000 South Vietnamese, was entirely covered by the United States.

With more imported wares than ever before, South Vietnamese who can afford it have gone on a buying spree. Japanese television sets and motorbikes have nearly cornered the market.

VILLAGES GET GIFTS

Backed by U.S. aid, the Saigon government is distributing a special gift of 1,000,000 piastres to every country village for a public works project of its own choice. This program will cost more than $18,000,000 if completed. There are 2,517 villages.

A feverish war boom grips all the cities at the back door of American logistics bases. In the shops, foreign perfumes, liquors, textiles, watches and other luxuries beckon. But the slums are growing.

There is no precise way to compare the cost of the United States' investment in South Vietnam with what the Soviet Union and China have spent to help North Vietnam.

An executive in the U.S. defence industry has estimated that the cost ratio is probably about 100 to 1 for arms alone.

Environment Fund Gets Donation

A former Victorian concerned with future planning and environment in the capital region, has made a donation to the 'Environment 100' project.

He is Dr. Christopher Tunnard, director of city planning at the School of Architecture at Yale, who was awarded an honorary degree and gave the convocation address at the University of Victoria graduation ceremonies in May.

Environment 100, sponsored by the university, students and citizens, is a campaign for funds to establish an environmental centre.

The object of the centre would be to assist in maintaining Victoria's environment for the next 100 years through conservation and proper planning.

While the size of the donation was not disclosed, Dr. B. J. Partridge, president of Uvic, said it was the campaign's greatest financial boost to date.

HOME GARDEN

Plants Which Survive Dry Spells

By HILDA BEASTALL

Plants which exist without watering during our rainless weeks in summer may not be numerous, but a complete list would be of great value to gardeners in areas of scanty water supply. Our native plants are obviously well adapted to these conditions, but cultivated plants with the same built-in resistance to drought, yet also resistant to winter frosts, must be carefully searched out.

Hilda

One group of shrubs containing several members well able to take care of themselves in dry weather is the genus Cotoneaster.

We see them climbing over low stone walls, in deserted gardens, and on dry banks where an attempt at watering would be useless.

By the same standard of drought resistance, certain cotoneasters do well against house foundations, and may be planted into quite small pockets of soil gouged from blacktop, or chipped out of cement or concrete.

Dozens of cotoneasters are listed, some of them tall and gracefully arching with clusters of red berries to brighten the shrubs in winter. Others are low, ground hugging, spreading their twiggy branches close to the soil, rooting as they go.

These are the ones most resistant to drought; the ones which will clothe sloping dry banks to hold the soil in place; or scramble over narrow ledges of precipitous terraces.

The leaves of these spreading cotoneasters are as a general rule, quite tiny, a feature which helps to make them resistant to drought. Most are free flowering and attractive to bees, resulting in quantities of scarlet berries quite early in fall.

Practically evergreen, spreading contoneasters are rarely without attraction at any period — tiny pinkish flowers, followed by red berries, then the new growths of small dark green leaves.

A few of those listed as being spreading or carpet-forming are: Cotoneaster adpressa, conspicua decora, congesta, humifusa (or Dammeri), melanotricha and Saldam.

These species have all been available locally at nurseries during the last few years, and most still are.

Missing from the list is C. horizontalis, for in some areas, gardeners have trouble with cotoneaster webworm on this shrub. Others of the same genus are seldom affected.

The best time to plant is late September. Roots will then become established during wet weather and given any break at all, the plants will be well away by their second summer to independence of artificial watering.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By Fred L. Karpin

Much more often than not, a declarer who has paid close attention to the opponents' bidding will profit thereby, since he will be provied with a clue or two as to the distribution and/or high cards possessed by the opposing bidder. But, at times, the opponents bidding can lead declarer astray.

The latter was the case in the deal presented today, in which our West defender made a bid that resulted in declarer adopting a losing line of play.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH
♠ A K J 8 2

◇ A 9 8
♣ A 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♣	3 ♣	Pass	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♣.

South's two club opening is not a typographical error.

North-South were employing "weak opening two bids" in spades, hearts, and diamonds (a respectable six-card suit, within a hand containing 6-12 high-card points). In this system, an opening bid of two clubs is used as a forcing bid (as a strong two bid), with opener showing his good suit on the next round of bidding.

West's three club over-call was made to tell his partner that West had a long club suit. North was safe in passing, despite his very good hand, since South, the two club opener had to bid again. South's five club response to North's Blackwood four no-trump call, showed either no aces or four aces. In time, a grand slam contract was reached.

West's six of clubs opening was captured by South's ace. As can be observed, declarer can make all 13 tricks by taking the normal line of play with nine trumps headed by the ace, king, and jack: cashing the ace and king to catch the queen.

Had West not made his three club overcall, declarer would undoubtedly have made the normal play. But, as he viewed it, West rated to have a seven-card suit for his overcall. And hence, mathematically speaking, West just didn't figure to have the doubleton Q-x of spades, since he rated to have only six cards in spades, hearts, and diamonds.

So, after winning the club ace at trick one, South cashed the ace of spades. He then entered dummy via the heart king, and laid down the 10 of spades. When East played low, declarer did likewise, finessing against East's hoped-for queen. West's queen of spades now took the setting trick.

fun with figures

By J A H HUNTER

Sam held out a scratch pad. "Look, I noted the total amount," he said. "But now you can't read it for sure. Two figures are quite unreadable."

"I'll say!" Alan chuckled. "It looks like seven two blob eight dollars and blob five cents. The two blobs could be anything."

"Maybe you'll figure it out," suggested Sam. "I forget the unit price and how many we bought, but I noticed that it was all fo just one-fifth as many of them as the price of each in cents."

You figure it out.

Mom's Broom Bat, Dog Get Into Act

DENVER (UPI) — The chase covered nine blocks and involved two burglary suspects, two teen-agers, a 12-year-old boy with a bat, a German shepherd, a mother with a broom and finally the police.

The two suspects were surprised burglarizing a suburban Englewood home and began running. A teenager chased them.

They jumped on a bicycle, one pedaling and the other on the handlebars. The 12-year-old bicycle owner carrying a bat joined in the chase, aided by his mother with a broom and their German shepherd.

Another teen-age boy entered the chase.

The suspects finally were arrested when they turned into an alley and found a Denver police car.

Police came to the aid of the suspects when the woman tried to swat with her broom Earl Kenner, 43, of Lakewood, and George R. Fetherkile, 44, of Denver. The men were taken into custody for investigation of assault and robbery.

CBC Pollution Special Gets Praise As Well-Researched, Informative

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP) — Running just about exactly counter to the findings of a special Ontario government committee, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission Thursday released a report giving the CBC high marks for its controversial 1967 TV special on air pollution, Air of Death.

"The program adequately reflected the information reasonably available at the time of the broadcast and is well able to stand as an example of informational programming backed by a wealth of research and serving a useful purpose," the CRTC report said.

The report thus was opposed to the Ontario committee study, which gave the program a pasting for use of "unwarranted, untruthful and irresponsible statements" and treating "a complex problem in a way designed to create alarm and fear."

Air of Death, the CRTC report said, "did achieve what clearly tappeared as its avowed purpose, namely, to awaken the public to the very real dangers of air pollution."

The report "recognizes the increased awareness of the public to problems of air pollution since the original broadcasting of the program Air of Death on Sunday, Oct. 22, 1967."

It faulted the CBC handling on one main point—the possibility of health hazards to humans as a result of fluoride fumes from fertilizer plant operations in the Dunnville, Ont., area.

"The program clearly stated that fluorine emissions were causing damage to plant and animal life in the area.

"While making reference to the fact that there was no conclusive proof of danger to human health, the program, however, left the unmistakable impression that expert medical opinion considered the human health issue to exist and to be serious."

Other medical opinion to the effect that there might not be such danger was available but not used, the report said.

" . . . In dealing with a subject as important and urgent as danger to human health, no effort should be spared to bring to the attention of the public the fact that there are conflicting views amongst medical practitioners on a subject, particularly when the research upon which the statement in the program was based demonstrates no direct clinical evidence for the contention that human health or life was in danger."

CRTC Report Contradicts Ontario Study

The CRTC report on Air of Death completed a circle for the program.

Fifteen days after it was broadcast, the Ontario government announced formation of a special committee under Dr. G. Edward Hall of Orillia, former president of the University of Western Ontario, to investigate air, soil and water pollution in Haldimand County, where Dunnville is located.

SOUGHT FACTS

The committee investigated the situation near the fertilizer plants of the Electric Reduction Co. of Canada Ltd., at Port Maitland near Dunnville, and the nearby Sherbrooke Metallurgical Co.

Its report brought down Dec. 10, 1968, although noting that area farmers had received many thousands of dollars in compensation from the fertilizer industry for damage to cattle and crops, said industrial pollutants were no danger to human health.

A special section in the report aimed the "untruthful and irresponsible" blast at the CBC for the program which apparently spurred the Ontario government to create the committee.

Two months after the Hall committee report, the CRTC announced it would hold a special Toronto hearing to determine, "in response to expressions of public concern" about Air of Death, whether the CBC had taken measures to maintain high standards in such information programming.

The hearing, with CRTC Vice-Chairman Harry J. Boyle presiding, was held in March, 1969. Sources said at the time one reason for it was to give the CBC a forum in which to reply to the Hall committee criticism.

The CRTC report said "the use of the term 'Dunnville' to describe the area allegedly affected by fluoride emissions was reasonable and proper in this instance."

Mr. Boyle, full-time CRTC member Real Therrien and Northrop Frye, a part-time member, who made up the CRTC team at the special hearing, reviewed all the exhibits filed and concluded the program "may well have been one of the most thoroughly researched programs in the history of television broadcasting."

Housing Project for Elderly In Victoria Set by Province

The provincial government has announced a housing project for Victoria for couples over 60 years of age with an annual income under $5,000.

Minister without Portfolio Isabel Dawson's office said the project of 10 to 12 units is designed to demonstrate the advantages of home ownership on a condominium and would be financed in part by the British Columbia Home Acquisition Grants Act, a second-mortgage plan.

The B.C. Housing Management Commission, the statement continued will act as the developers and will announce specifications and call for proposals soon.

Robert Andras, federal minister responsible for housing, has said the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will make a first mortgage available. The project will be eligible for second-mortgage financing under the provincial Home Acquisition Grants Act.

Cyclists Score

WINNIPEG (CP) — In an 18-11 bipartisan vote, the Manitoba legislature's Law Amendments Committee Thursday night chose to make the wearing of safety helmets optional for motorcyclists.

It marked a victory for the motorcyclists' lobby, even though no rider was in the committee room to witness it.

Last month, with jackets displaying club crests, the motorcyclists roared up to the legislative building on their machines to protest against the compulsory helmet legislation.

Progress Noted

SASKATOON (CP) — Professor Norman Ward, co-author of a report on English and French-speaking members of Parliament, said Thursday there has been considerable change for the better since the report was prepared five years ago.

Prof. Ward, of the University of Saskatchewan, said in an interview shortly after the report was released Thursday the improvement since the interviews with MPs in 1965 was because of simultaneous translation of speeches in the Commons and committees and the use of parallel columns of French and English in reports.

EDMONTON (CP) — Two men, one a United States citizen wanted by Canadian immigration authorities, were charged with defamatory libel after police found thousands of pieces of literature Wednesday naming Prime Minister Trudeau and a city magistrate. Thunderstorm Pounds Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — A heavy thunderstorm rolled over the Edmonton area Thursday evening, leaving the city with hundreds of flooded basements, several areas without power and streets blocked by flood water.

Police said they were investigating a report of a man being washed down a sewer and another of a stranded motorist abandoning his car and a child in a flooding underpass.

A police spokesman said the reports were unconfirmed but officers were investigating.

He also said police switchboards were having difficulty keeping up with calls reporting power blackouts, washed-out roads, sewer covers popping and numerous accidents.

The Edmonton weather office reported that hail accompanied the storm. Hailstones ranging from the size of grapes to walnuts fell about 20 miles north of Calgary, said a forecaster.

Drug Use Climbs In Interior

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Police sought today to arrest 18 persons to close out a drug roundup in which 31 persons, including seven juveniles, have already been arrested on 47 counts of drug trafficking.

Staff Sgt. Gordon Simons of Kamloops RCMP said Thursday the soft drug problem has increased in Interior British Columbia "and if this keeps up we will have to form a special Interior drug detail."

The roundup follows two months of undercover work by two policemen, covering the Cariboo, the Thompson Valley, the North Okanagan, Kelowna, Revelstoke and Clearwater.

Ages of those arrested range from 16 to 41, most are around 20.

Police said much of the drug supply comes from Vancouver, some directly from the United States. Marijuana also is being grown in the Interior; police said they've been too busy to go into remote areas for it.

Apple Outlook Dim

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford says the outlook for British Columbia's Okanagan apple growers is far from sweet, and unless new markets are found, the situation could turn distinctly sour.

"Washington State has planted thousands of new apple trees and unless we find new markets in the Pacific Rim countries, things look far from good for B.C. apple growers," he said in an interview Thursday.

Shelford said the world apple crop is zooming and the European Common Market nations, especially, are increasing their apply crops year by year.

Search Ended

MACKENZIE (CP) — Canadian Forces divers Thursday gave up the search for Lloyd Gurr of Salmon Arm, a commercial diver who disappeared in Williston Lake July 2 while attempting to salvage a boat in 100 feet of water.

Incentives Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas C. Marshall, president of the British Columbia Hospitals Association, suggested Thursday that the government use incentives to promote efficiency. He advocated a system whereby "the efficiently operated hospital will enjoy some benefit at the expense of the less efficient hospital."

Cominco Cuts Lead Price

MONTREAL (CP) — Cominco Ltd. has announced that effective immediately its lead price in Canada is being reduced by half a cent to 16 cents a pound.

The price reduction followed the price cut of one cent to 15½ cents a pound by major lead producers in the U.S.

H. T. Fargey, vice-president of marketing for Cominco, said the American price reduction was "difficult to understand in light of the current world supply-demand relationship and in particular the continuing escalation of mining and production costs for this metal."

Canadian lead consumption so far this year is about the same level as it was in the corresponding period in 1969.

The price reduction by Cominco, Canada's biggest lead producer, followed a price cut in the U.S. initiated by American Smelting and Refining Co. and by St. Joseph Lead Co., the leading American lead producer.

U.S. Smelting and Refining Co. and Anaconda Co. also reduced their price of lead.

Postal Lockouts Hit Island

BELFAST SEARCH YIELDS WEAPONS

BELFAST (AP) — More than 11,000 British troops took part today in the biggest arms search ever made in Northern Ireland. They found eight rifles, four pistols and 4,700 rounds of ammunition in the sweep through the Black Mountains overlooking Belfast.

The search was part of a huge security operation in advance of marches Monday by the Protestant Order of Orange.

Cabinet Splits On Telesat Contract Issue

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A recommendation to the government that the contract for Canada's first telecommunications satellite be awarded to Hughes Aircraft of Canada has touched off a cabinet fight between Communications Minister Eric Kierans and Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, according to sources here.

'Buy Canadian' Idea Favored

The proposal that the bid be awarded to the American firm was made by Telesat Canada Corporation, for which Kierans is the responsible cabinet minister, and is being disputed by Mackasey on the grounds that it would rob Canada of the opportunity to develop its own science and technology in space communications.

Mackasey is reported to favor giving the contract to a Canadian firm even if the cost would be higher—and it apparently would be.

RCA Limited of Montreal, armed with a letter of intention from the Canadian government, presented a price bid for building Canada's satellite of around $42 million. The company said it understood the intention was to build existing Canadian space technology and to become a leader in the development of a satellite communications system rather than simply a user of the new techniques as they may be developed by others.

As a result of feasibility studies earlier, RCA was chosen as the prime contractor. It received a letter of intent dated June 20, 1969, from Kierans indicating a contract would be negotiated within four months for the development, fabrication, integration and test of the satellite. RCA accepted a direction contained in the letter of intent to use another major Canadian company as a subcontractor.

Company Began to Prepare

On the basis of the letter of intention and RCA's understanding of government desire for a Canadian national space program to upgrade this country's technology in the new field, the company was authorized by its directors to construct an aerospace building specifically for the design, development and construction of space hardware.

It started to hire additional engineers and support personnel in anticipation of the requirements of the program and estimated cost of the new facilities at $4 million.

It came as a shock to the company when its first proposal to Telesat outlining the high risk involved, was refused on the grounds it was based on RCA's assumption that the development phase of the program should be "cost reimbursable." This had been the practice followed in previous Canadian satellite programs.

RCA was asked to submit a firm price for the program as soon as possible. Specification were upgraded. RCA then proposed a firm price of $55 million including all non-recurring costs in connection with the new technology. The bid was submitted to Telesat on May 11, 1970.

U.S. Firm Offers Low Bid

At that time Telesat received an unsolitited bid from Hughes Aircraft with Northern Electric Co. Ltd. at around $30 million.

Wednesday a new bid to build the satellite was reportedly presented to the government by a Toronto firm, Spar Aerospace Products Ltd. of Malton. The Spar bid would involve RCA of Canada and Lockheed Aircraft of the U.S. in a new Canadian based company which would build the satellite for a reported $38 million with 65 per cent Canadian content.

At the same time RGA of Canada withdrew its bid and presented a new one.

RCA has informed Telesat and Kierans it would be prepared to enter into discussions looking toward a cost reimbursable incentive approach in which the company's fee would be based on its successfully meeting mutually agreed standards for cost goals, delivery schedules and performance. In these discussions RCA would be prepared to discuss the cost estimates and risk evaluations that it has developed.

It set a target cost of $35 million for the program with 65 per cent Canadian content. It has given its assurance of using its best efforts to complete the program on that basis.

RCA has pointed to the unfortunate circumstances for Canadian industry that would arise if the Canadian domestic satellite were to be built in the U.S. It has offered to hold discussions with Telesat Canada or with other government departments in an effort to resolve the problem that will undoubtedly have a long-term effect on Canada's role in the

By BOB MITCHELL

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson today termed as "most mischievous" remarks by a labor official that deputy minister Bill Sands was appointed mediator in the construction lockout to get Peterson "off the hook."

B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Ray Haynes said Thursday Sands' assignment in talks going on between unions and the Construction Labor Relations Association is to save face for the provincial government.

"The pressure is now on Sands to work hard to get Peterson off the hook," Haynes said.

He was referring to the 10-day deadline set Tuesday by Peterson for both sides in the three-month-old construction lockout to resume work or face compulsory arbitration.

DATE CONFIRMED

Peterson confirmed today the 10-day period will end at midnight July 17, one week from today.

"If Haynes spent as much time trying to settle disputes as he does causing trouble between labor and government, he'd be earning the big salary he gets," Peterson said.

He declined to confirm Sands had been appointed to oversee round-the-clock talks between the CLRA and five trade unions at the University of B.C.

Peterson said Tuesday he wanted work started in 10 days, with a 60-day period to follow in which settlement of the wage dispute between labor and management could take place.

The unions have indicated they won't return to work unless they get signed agreements with the CLRA in the meantime.

Thursday Peterson said if work does not resume by the deadline there won't be any 60-day period, and the government would invoke the back-to-work arbitration section of the Mediation Commission Act.

Iceland Premier Dies in Fire

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (Reuters) — Premier Bjarni Benediktsson, 62, who led the movement bringing Iceland into NATO, was burned to death early today along with his wife and grandson when a fire swept the premier's state-owned summer house at Thingvalla, 38 miles from the capital.

The premier, his wife Sigridur Bjoernsdottir and his two-year-old grandson Benedikt Wilmundarsson went there to spend the night.

Firemen hurried to the scene when the alarm was raised but the wooden building was reduced to ashes.

A neighbor raised the alarm when he was the house in flames.

Benediktsson, chairman of the Independence party, became premier in November, 1963, when he succeeded Olafur Thors who resigned for health reasons.

He had previously served in the Thors administration as minister of justice and later as foreign minister.

TONKIN RESOLUTION REPEALED . . . AGAIN

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The Senate emphasized today its repudiation of the 1964 Tonkin Gulf resolution by voting a second time to repeal it.

The vote was in the form of a resolution to repeal the measure, which was rushed through Congress in August, 1964, following a reported attack by North Vietnamese torpedo boats on two American destroyers.

The congressional action was later used by President Johnson to justify the American troop buildup in Vietnam.

Nanaimo Strike Said Reason

Times News Services

Five Vancouver Island post offices are closed today as a result of lockouts ordered by the district director of postal services in Vancouver in the continuing dispute between Ottawa and the postal unions.

Port Alberni, Courtenay, Ladysmith, Campbell River and Duncan post offices were shut down after the union called walkouts in Nanaimo, Vancouver International Airport and Ladner offices.

The five island centres closed by the post office department all receive their mail through the Nanaimo office. More than 200 workers are involved in British Columbia and close to 1,000 are either on strike or locked out across Canada.

The day's tally shows the unions had called out a total of 580 workers in seven centres across the country.

The post office department retaliated by sending home 416 men from 27 stations.

Robert McGarry, strike director for the Toronto area, said a directive from national strike headquarters in Ottawa said that workers in Barrie, Alliston, Orangeville and the southwest end of the City of Toronto, all in Ontario and in Regina did not report for work today.

He said that according to the Ottawa directive these and the B.C. offices were the only areas where workers would be on strike today.

He also said that post offices in the Ontario centres of Midland and Newmarket and Station W — the northwest end of Toronto — were closed by postal authorities.

"It has to be an illegal lockout," he said. "There's mail in Midland and Newmarket and Station W is loaded."

PLANS SUIT

The Council of Postal Unions said Thursday it is planning legal action against Postmaster-General Eric Kierans because of the shutdowns of local post offices this week.

Centres shut down Thursday were Edmundston, Grand Falls and Campbellton, all in New Brunswick.

Duncan local president of the postal union, Mrs. Mary Woods, said today the shutdown was expected. A total of 17 employees and four rural routes are affected there.

At Ladysmith, where four employees were laid off, postmaster Chuck Irving said there was no mail.

Mrs. Pearl Cassidy, the spokesman for postal workers, said they are "rather disconcerted" because although there are no letters there was work which can be done over the wicket. She called the post office action "rather high-handed" and inconvenient to patrons.

Postmasters called today's action closures because of reduced business, not lockouts.

The Grand Falls post office reopened today and the Edmundston office was scheduled to do so at noon local time. Offices at Campbellton and Dalhousie, also in New Brunswick, were to be closed all day.

Earlier in the week, 13 Ontario and Quebec centres were shut down but re-opened after Montreal workers ended a 48-hour walkout.

The council, negotiating for 27,000 letter carriers and other postal workers, said in a statement that "Kierans' action is not only a violation of various laws and regulations, but is also a vicious act, taken without regard for the citizens of Canada and the postal system."

Post offices were ordered Monday to close down if they thought service could not be provided.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, meanwhile, said he'd be "delighted" if the unions would be willing to accept a settlement of the dispute giving wage increases of 7¼ per cent a year.

SASK. WORKERS FACE ARBITRATION

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher, taking a step he has threatened for more than a week, today signed his name to an order-in-council bringing Saskatchewan's construction workers under compulsory arbitration.

The emergency measure was to be sent to Lt.-Gov. Stephen Worobetz later in the day for his signature. The law was passed 12 days ago but the final step was withheld in the hope a settlement would be reached.

Thatcher, speaking at a news conference, said amendments bringing plumbers and electricians under scope of the arbitration law "will take effect immediately."

While the plumbers and electricians have returned to work wherever jobs are available, negotiations with contractors on new collective agreements have been deadlocked.

Egypt Loses Three MiGs

From Reuters — AP

Israeli and Egyptian jets fought several dogfights over the Suez canal today and a Tel Aviv military spokesman said three Egyptian MIG-21s were shot down.

The MiGs were downed by missiles and aerial cannon fire when they tried to intercept a number of Israeli raiders bombing Egyptian targets in the northern sector of the canal this morning, the spokesman said.

Everyone Wants Spiro Agnew —On Face of Wristwatch

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A suburban doctor, his wife and 10 children are working around the clock to fill thousands of orders for their invention, the Spiro Agnew wristwatch.

"Its a madhouse," said Dr. Hale Dougherty. "I haven't been to my office in days. .. Ever since Ethel Kennedy wore her watch to a party, our phone hasn't stopped ringing."

Dougherty was sorting $15.95 Agnew watches on the family pool table Thursday while his wife and children addressed labels, licked stamps and made trips to the post office.

A phone jangled and a child shouted: "Mom, President Nixon's niece wants to buy three watches right away."

The timepiece resembles the classic Mickey Mouse watch. But this one features a caricature of the vice-president. His red-gloved hands, one making the peace symbol, point out the time.

"We weren't really trying to poke fun at the vice-president," said Dougherty, but he added wryly: "Neither were we saying he's the greatest person alive."

The watch started as a family project, says Dougherty, 38, a general practitioner.

The eldest Dougherty son, Stephen, 18, home from college last Christmas, told the family a joke: "Did you know that Mickey Mouse wears a Spiro Agnew watch?"

"A Spiro Agnew watch?" said Dougherty. "Why not?"

The doctor's wife, Pat, explained that the couple, married at 19, coined money-making ideas to get Dougherty through medical school.

Cominco Cuts Lead Price

MONTREAL (CP) — Cominco Ltd. has announced that effective immediately its lead price in Canada is being reduced by half a cent to 16 cents a pound.

The price reduction followed the price cut of one cent to 15½ cents a pound by major lead producers in the U.S.

H. T. Fargey, vice-president of marketing for Cominco, said the American price reduction was "difficult to understand in light of the current world supply-demand relationship and in particular the continuing escalation of mining and production costs for this metal."

Canadian lead consumption so far this year is about the same level as it was in the corresponding period in 1969.

The price reduction by Cominco, Canada's biggest lead producer, followed a price cut in the U.S. initiated by American Smelting and Refining Co. and by St. Joseph Lead Co., the leading American lead producer.

U.S. Smelting and Refining Co. and Anaconda Co. also reduced their price of lead.

Pan Am also reported an operating profit of $4,047,000, compared with a $2,267,000 operating loss in May 1969. Total operating revenues were $98,405,000, up 12.3 per cent over the $87,588,000 for May 1969. Total operating expenses were $94,358,000, up 5.0 per cent over the $89,855,000 for May 1969.

Capital gains after taxes on disposal of property and equipment, for May were $569,000, compared with capital losses of $24,000 for May 1969.

With the May profits, Pan Am reversed a trend of eight consecutive months of losses.

Net loss for the first five months of the year was $24,846,000, or 71 cents a share, compared with a loss of $18,821,000, or 55 cents a share, for the same period last year.

U.S. Plywood Cuts Production Estimate

TACOMA (AP) — The American Plywood Association has scaled down its estimate of 1970 industry production to 14,700,000,000 square feet from an initial forecast of 15,800,000,000 square feet.

Browson J. Lewis, executive vice-president of the association said the new production "directly reflects the impact on our markets of the prolonged housing slowdown."

"Home construction now is at a rock-bottom annual rate of 1,200,000 units," he said.

'Many Credit Unions Shirking Responsibility'

MONTREAL (CP) — R. C. Robertson of Phoenix, Ariz., president of the newly-formed World Council of Credit Unions, is concerned that the credit union movement is not doing enough for the young and the poor.

While in Montreal to attend the annual convention of credit union executives, Mr. Robertson said:

"The history of great peoples' movements shows that as they become successful they become complacent and end up conservative."

He emphasized that the credit union movement was founded to help the disadvantaged but that many credit unions were shirking their responsibility.

ROSE THROUGH RANKS

Executives should take a good look at their membership and see whether enough is being done for the poor in their midst.

"Most credit union executives have risen through the ranks," he said. "They start off as volunteers and then switch to working full time."

Consequently, the movement has become dominated by the middle-aged who tend to "play it safe" instead of making the extra effort required to meet the needs of the poor.

Mr. Robertson, general manager of the Arizona State Employee's Credit Union, added:

"Being irresponsible is certainly not a fault found in most poor people, but what they do lack most critically is hope and somebody who will give them a chance to improve themselves."

If the "socially conscious young" could be attracted to the movement, they would provide the needed impetus toward greater social involvement in meeting the needs of the poor.

He said that students at the University of Michigan had formed a credit union because they were tired of the "high-handed attitudes" of local banks.

The students' credit union now has more than 1,800 members and over $188,000 in assets.

MUST ENCOURAGE YOUTH

It is important to encourage young people and students to get involved with credit unions not so much because the young need the credit union movement but because the movement needs the young.

"We now are a movement made up of middle-aged people, many of whom have a depression psychology, Mr. Robertson said.

"We are a movement that has been in existence for many long years. But before this decade is over, we must emerge as a movement infused with young blood if we are to survive as a people's movement."

The world-wide organization has about $16,000,000,000 in assets and is committed to spreading its philosophy in both developed and developing countries.

Oats, barley and rye had a lighter than usual dull trade.

Lakehead prices for class two and IGA wheat were all ⅛ higher.

Measles Muddle

Sometimes Those Red Spots Can Be Terrifying to Women; A New Vaccine and Tight Money Have Produced a Dilemma

By DON VIPOND
An Analysis

The provincial government is in another bind on health matters — this time involving that traditional childhood malady, measles.

And an additional irony is that the bind arises from the appearance of a new vaccine which prevents one kind of measles.

The measles problem mixes emotion and money and that combination can produce clouds of confusion.

The emotion: women who contract German measles in their first three months of pregnancy stand a 50-50 chance of having their child born abnormal — deaf, dwarfed, with a malformed heart, eye disease or mentally retarded.

There aren't words to describe how a mother-to-be feels when she finds she has German measles and learns the odds against her child yet to be born.

The money: to protect pregnant women, a number of public health doctors are pushing hard for a province-wide blanket immunization of children with the new vaccine, the first step to erasing the disease.

There are about 450,000 children, aged one to 12, in B.C. The provincial government is now dickering with the two vaccine manufacturers. No one knows what the price for bulk purchase will be but if it works out to about $2 a shot, the immunization campaign would cost many times the $108,000 Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has so far pledged for purchasing measles vaccines.

The fact there are two forms of measles, two vaccines and one immunization campaign already under way isn't helping public understanding a bit.

●

There is Red measles, called Rubeola by doctors. And there is German measles called Rubella. Both are relatively mild — with the major exception of German measles affecting women in early pregnancy.

Red measles vaccine has been around several years and the provincial government has been providing it free since last September. A solid start has already been made in immunizing school-age children and some of the $108,000 Loffmark has pledged will be going to buy more rubeola vaccine.

But Will Campaign Really Work?

The rubella vaccine, on the other hand, is the hot new product, available in Canada for about two months. The federal government has launched an immunization program for Indian children and some of the province's medical health officers have been outspoken in demanding the same sort of attack — immunization of all children.

They argue the only practical way to protect pregnant women is to wipe out the disease. And the only way to do that is blanket immunization.

Greater Victoria's senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, has taken this stand. So has his counterpart in Vancouver, Dr. Gerald Bonham.

"The medical community has given in clear terms its best advice," says Bonham. "We have lived up to our responsibility and now it is the provincial government's responsibility. They must take the responsibility for the results of their decision."

Vancouver's health board estimates that already 200 women will give birth to deformed babies starting in November and this figure is expected to rise as a German measles epidemic continues.

There are no statistics or predictions available on how many babies deformed by German measles have or may be born in Greater Victoria.

An epidemic of German measles already here?

●

A number of doctors say yes. Loffmark says it isn't an epidemic.

An indicator: During April, May and June of this year there were 97 cases of German measles among children in the Greater Victoria, Saanich, Sooke and Gulf Islands school districts.

There were 16 cases for the same period last year.

(The four school districts have about 45,000 pupils.)

Will there be a province-wide immunization program against German measles and, if so, how complete will be the coverage?

"What we're trying to do right now is determine the facts and make a decommendation," Dr. A. A. Larsen said Thursday. He is the provincial government's expert on epidemics.

●

Besides haggling the vaccine price with the manufacturers, the government is asking the province's medical health officers to advise how much rubeola vaccine they will need in the coming year.

When these figures are in, the government's consultants will make their recommendation. It will then be a decision for the politicans on how much money will be made available for the new Rubella vaccine.

"People seem to feel the issue is all black and white," said Larsen. "It's not. There are many shades of grey."

Some of the grey areas on a blanket immunization campaign:

Will parents give their permission for children to be immunized?

With even the most popular vaccines, like Salk for polio protection, acceptance was just 95 per cent by parents. Some object to immunization on religious grounds. Others are just indifferent. They never get around to signing that card their youngster brings home from school.

The government's experience has been only 85 per cent parental acceptance on some vaccine campaigns. A gap like that with the new Rubella vaccine would considerably weaken the attack to erase German measles.

Larsen notes there are different viewpoints on whether such an immunization campaign can ever be successful.

"People with much more experience than those of us here aren't convinced it will work"

A 50-50 Chance Of Disaster

Many American states are pushing the blanket campaign hard. Australia, on the other hand, is not, he notes.

Some states have as a requirement for school attendance immunization with several vaccines. But in such cases there is always a "conscientious objector" exclusion.

"I don't think our government wants compulsion."

Larsen said any Rubella vaccine campaign would have to be sold hard.

On the face of it, there's no benefit for the boy who is immunized. It will require education to point out he will thus avoid infecting his mother, or perhaps the neighbor's wife, who might be carrying a child.

At the moment it appears as though there will not be enough provincial money for a blanket campaign.

If this turns out to be so, the government is bound to establish a priority list for who receives what vaccine is available.

Larsen suggests that girls about 11 years old will head the list because they are just reaching child-bearing age.

The vaccine must never be given to women who are or are likely soon to become pregnant. A vaccine has weakened, but live, virus and would represent the same threat to a pregnant woman as the disease itself.

For parents unwilling to await the meshing of government wheels, the vaccine is available locally under two brand names, Meruvax and Cendevax, at about $4. They should, of course, consult their doctor on the matter.

"I don't think that's an unreasonable expense for a person to undertake," Dr. John Higgins, president of the Victoria Medical Society, said Thursday.

He noted it is equivalent to the cost of a couple of cartons of beer.

"That's not bad, you know."

THIS IS IT

'Get-Away Day' Summer Madness

By Jack Scott

One of our editorial writers, a man with a forehead nine inches high and a little balloon over his head containing the work "THINK," has suggested I write about Friday. This being Friday, what could be more appropriate except, perhaps, to write about nothing?

That, you see, is what's happening to Friday. It has become the most unproductive day of the week. Absenteeism, once a Monday reaction to an over-done weekend, is now more common on Friday in anticipation of an over-done weekend.

The managers of eight Victoria firms I polled on the subject are unanimous on that score. They agree, as well, that concentration and dedication are in a progressive stage of erosion on this penultimate day of the week that leads to mid-afternoon disintegration. Item: More dishes are dropped by waitresses in the city's largest restaurant on Friday than on all the other days together.

"It's a Gazing Out The Window Day," says the manager of one of the largest insurance companies. "The atmosphere of the office is unlike any other day of the week. More laughing. More horseplay around the coffee corner. Morale is great. Business is terrible. It's the same sort of mood that you'd probably find just before a prison break. The bodies are here. The spirits have flown."

Scott

Management appears to take a fatalistic view of the unhinged Friday worker. Sales representatives, in many cases, no longer bother to sally forth in pursuit of business. Clients are very often unreceptive or downright hostile. Euphoria, it seems, is the toughest form of sales resistance.

Two law firm executives said they'd abandoned all but essential dictation on Fridays in deference to stenographers whose minds are more tuned to sun and sand than writs and torts.

"I'm a little bit restless myself," owned one. "I want to be loved," admitted the other, "so it's Never on Friday. Besides, a lot of our girls now come to the office Friday in their informal, going-away-for-the-weekend outfits. Distracting, if you know what I mean."

★ ★ ★

Purely manual workers are apt to be as helium-headed as cerebral workers, thus giving credence to the legend that automobiles assembled on a Friday are the lemons.

A sawmill operator confirms that it is the worst of all days (though Monday is a close second) for accidents. "We have a TGIF Club spirit at the mill," he said. "That's the Thank God It's Friday Club. Plays hell with Workmen's Compensation."

Friday's child is loving and giving, so the fable goes, and giving, in terms of cold, hard cash, is Friday all over.

Retail sales in every line are at their peak. More booze gurgles across the LCB counters Friday than on any other day. Bank clearings, because of the extended hours and Friday payrolls, are highest.

Brokerage houses know it as a selling day, though that's of longer standing since share-selling is a hedge against unforeseen disasters over the weekend. (Both the Second World War and the Korean War began after the week's close.)

Restaurants, which once counted Saturday as their big day, now do their heaviest trade on Mad Friday, the day that the dishes are falling.

The day may begin like every other day, but by noon on Friday the Victoria ant-hill is teeming. Everybody seems on the move.

★ ★ ★

In the office of the B.C. Automobile Association the inquiries on road reports have begun to stream in by mid-morning. Extra patrols are being assigned in the traffic division at Victoria police headquarters. It is the one day, as Sgt. Ron Bentley will tell you there, when downtown traffic can be snarled at any given time between nine in the morning and nine-thirty at night.

The local radio stations will have more listeners between five and nine this night than they will all day Monday. Seven out of every 10 cars with radios (and 93 percent of Victoria cars have them) will be getting the road and weather reports, all part of The Great Escape Syndrome.

At the Swartz Bay terminal the ferry people are braced for their onslaught. (Curious thing that none of the ferry officials can explain is that when Monday is a holiday the mass exodus for the long weekend actually begins Thursday night, even when Friday is a working day, thus suggesting that rather large numbers of Victorians are goofing off.)

"You might call it Emancipation Day," said the editorial writer profoundly when I gave him all this information and, his eyes on distant horizons, he swept back into his office, giving himself a nasty crack on the door. That's the way it is Fridays.

WORK STARTS on rebuilt sewerage outfall at Macaulay Point, Esquimalt, as dredge is moved into position. Ratzlaff Poole and Archibald, North Vancouver, will build the 6,100-foot 36-inch steel pipe outfall for the Capital Regional District for $494,000. New system will also include trunk lines leading to the rebuilt outfall. Pipe for the outfall is being shipped to Victoria where it will be welded into installation lengths, floated into position and lowered 200 feet to the ocean floor.

New Pumps Blamed For Sudden Water Curbs

Watering restrictions recently imposed by the Greater Victoria Water Board became unexpectedly necessary because two new pumps in Saanich increased consumption by 15 million gallons a day.

Mayor Courtney Haddock, who is also a member of the city's water commission, told a Thursday meeting of city council the two 200-horsepower pumps were installed to increase water pressure in Saanich by eight pounds.

NOBODY GUESSED

Haddock said no one guessed the increased pressure would raise consumption from the previous 40 million gallons a day to 55 million gallons.

The restrictions do not mean Victoria faces a water shortage this summer, he said. They will prevent a shortage.

Commission member Ald. Hugh Ramsay said the restrictions are not the result of poor planning by the water board.

"Comsumption is a difficult thing to compute. You've almost got to be a magician," he said.

And Ald. Cecil Parrott said the need for restrictions will end once the Sooke Lake dam is completed in the fall. With normal rainfall completion of the dam will increase the supply of water for Greater Victoria by 700 million gallons.

No Lounging This Summer For Part-Time Soldiers

The 175 students enrolled in a special seven-week militia course which began at Bay Street Armory Wednesday "are not around here to lie on their backsides", says their commanding officer, Maj. Ted Piete.

Piete says the students, aged mostly from 16 to 25, are well-mannered, eager to learn and work.

"Contrary to what some people think, we have not had any of the hippie element approach us."

Piete says that within a week of advertising there were 200 applicants. This has now risen to 240 but he must stay within the 175 quota.

Similar courses have been arranged across Canada as part of the federal government's plan to provide summer activity and employment for students.

ALDERMAN CHARGES:

'Gangbuster Techniques'

The lure of cheap land is causing apartment developers to use "gangbuster techniques" to crack the uniformity of residential neighborhoods, Ald. Hugh Ramsay charged Thursday.

RAMSAY

. . . fights amendment

"There is ample apartment-zoned property in Victoria without this constant infringement into residential areas," Ramsay told city council.

He said developers eye residential sites because land is cheaper there. And once an apartment is built in a single family district, more apartments and eventually commercial developments follow.

This if fine for developers, he said, but it ruins residential neighborhoods.

Ramsay was speaking against changing the city's zoning bylaw to permit construction of an apartment complex at the corner of Ivy Place and Cedar Hill Road.

PUBLIC HEARING

The bylaw amendment would lead to a public hearing. If objection at the hearing was strong council could refuse to give final approval to the zoning change.

But Ramsay said a public hearing was unnecessary for two reasons.

First, he had a petition with the names of 196 people who opposed the project; and he claimed other petitions are still circulating.

Second, council had previously refused to grant zoning approval on the lot when a public hearing showed residents loudly opposed an earlier design for the apartments.

And he said the revised design is more objectionable to the petitioners than the first.

Aldermen Percy Frampton, Clyde Savage and Ove Witt spoke against Ramsay's arguments. And Frampton said it is more democratic to proceed with the public hearing and listen to the developer's side.

WITT SKEPTICAL

Witt said he did not believe all the signatures on the petition came from residents of the area.

"Their plan has approval of the advisory planning commission and it would be hasty to kill the bylaw amendment at this time," he said.

"I couldn't agree with you more," said Savage.

Ramsay answered that he did not understand how council could consider approval of a plan they had once refused in similar form.

He said when apartments are built in residential districts, land values and property taxes increase without real residential benefit.

Just as anyone can attend a public hearing, anyone can sign a petition objecting to proposed apartments, Ramsay told Witt.

Assistant city manager Bill Hooson today said requests for zoning changes most often come from apartment developers.

The city, he explained, cannot control apartment design, only land use.

Approval of a developer's proposal by the advisory planning commission is only a recommendation to council. Council can reject the recommendation and kill the project right there.

In this case, as Ald. Harold Olafson said at council the advisory planning commission only [illegible] only favored recommending approval.

Ald. Cecil Parrott then suggested the matter be referred back to the commission.

"I don't like this shilly-shallying around and passing the buck," Ramsay answered. And he moved the bylaw amendment be received and filed, effectively killing the proposal.

Ald. Tom Christie seconded. Witt, Savage and Frampton voted against the motion. Ramsay, Christie, Olafson, Parrott and Mayor Courtney Haddock in favor.

PITS LIT, LOGGERS POISED

They're Burning to Go at Sooke

The two spar trees used for speed-climbing are in place on the Sooke Flats and the pit fires for the beef barbecue were lit this morning.

★ ★ ★

All the organizers of All-Sooke Day need now is good weather and the weatherman is willing to oblige, predicting sun with possible cloudy periods for Saturday.

Last year a record 12,000 watched the logging sports which begin this year at 1:30 p.m.

Five national championships will be up for grabs when about 50 loggers compete for nearly $2,500 in prize money.

The five national events included in a field of 16 events are the springboard chop, the standing block chop, peavey log-rolling, log-bucking and speed-climbing.

The main event could be the speed-climbing championship in which the co-defending champs, Gary Johnston of Vancouver and Owen Carney of Squamish, will face world champion Dwight Carpenter of Castle Rock, Wash.

Carney recently returned from Expo '70 in Japan where he represented Canada in log birling.

Dick Herrling of Sooke will defend his springboard chop championship while Australia's Cole Shevalis will meet all challengers in an attempt to retain his peavey log rolling title.

★ ★ ★

At midnight tonight the pit fires, after burning all day, will be raked to coals and 500 pounds of beef will be wrapped in paper and wet sacks and buried to bake for 12 hours.

The green alder fires for the 1,000 pounds of salmon to be barbecued will be started Saturday morning.

Family Entertainment Experiment a Flop

DETROIT (AP) — A theatre opened by two priests whose parishoners complained about the lack of suitable family movies has closed for lack of patronage.

Rev. Richard Ward, co-pastor of St. Aloysius Roman Catholic Church, and Rev. John Nader of St. Mary's Church leased a downtown theatre and opened May 16 with a double bill of W. C. Field comedies.

Next shown were Romeo and Juliet, Thoroughly Modern Millie and Four Clowns.

Prices were scaled at $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children, the priests said.

They ended the experiment Thursday, explaining that not enough people attended the movies to cover the $4,200-a-week basic expenses of running the theatre.

Ex-Policeman Found Guilty In Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal court jury found former assistant Seattle police chief M. E. Cook guilty of perjury Thursday on charges that he lied to a grand jury about knowledge of a police payoff and shakedown system.

The 12-day trial shook the Seattle police department as a procession of officers, tavern owners and bartenders testified to a payoff system under which officers may have received $140,000 a year for 30 years.

The city's acting police chief, Frank Moore, became ill last week and Mayor Wes Uhlman replaced him with Charles Gain, police chief in Oakland, Calif. Uhlman said Gain would be on leave of absence from Oakland until a new permanent chief can be named in Seattle.

Cook, 56, who retired in May after 29 years on the force, was allowed to remain free on his own recognizance. Sentencing was set for Aug. 10. The jury of seven men and five women got the case Wednesday and deliberated for a total of 11 hours.

McCormack's Aide Guilty Of Perjury

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal court jury found Martin Sweig guilty of one count of perjury Thursday night and acquitted him on five other perjury counts and one conspiracy count in the influence-peddling trial of the chief aide of Speaker McCormack of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Sweig, 48, suspended from his Washington job, faces a maximum five-year prison term and a $2,000 fine.

His lawyer, Paul T. Smith, said he would appeal the verdict.

The eight men and four women had deliberated nearly 17 hours before announcing their decision to Judge Marvin E. Frankel.

The government charged that Sweig conspired with lobbyist Nathan Voloshen, 70, to defraud the government through the influence-peddling scheme. Both men also were charged with trying to cover up their activities by lying to a grand jury.

Voloshen pleaded guilty and is awaiting sentence. He was said by the government to have charged $169,000 in fees to favor seekers for whom he intervened with government agencies.

Sweig was accused of co-operating with Voloshen in the use of McCormack's name and prestige ""to sell favors from his office."

McCormack, 78, testified during the trial that he was unaware that his office was used as a base for influence peddling.

The government said Sweig's motive was to obtain gifts from Voloshen. The defence insisted Sweig never received a penny from the lobbyist.

Fare Hike Invalidated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals invalidated Thursday a Civil Aeronautics Board order of last September granting U.S. domestic airlines a six-per-cent fare increase.

The action was taken in an appeal filed by Representative John E. Moss (Dem., Calif.) and 31 other members of the House of Representatives.

Moss, a member of the House commerce committee, had protested that the board granted the fare increase after a series of closed meetings with airline representatives and without public hearing.

Moss said the court upheld the congressmen's position that the board acted illegally in allowing the fare increase without public notice and hearing and remanded the case to the board for further proceedings.

The court order, set to be effective after 21 days, allowed 14 days for a request for rehearing.

The board said it was studying the opinion and would have no comment on it immediately.

Escapee Jailed

CHILLIWACK (CP) — John Boack, 17, of Victoria, one of three inmates who escaped last weekend from the Chilliwack Forest Camp, was sentenced Thursday to three months for escaping and three months concurrent for car theft. Boack was raised to adult court. Two men who escaped with him were sentenced earlier this week.

Nanaimo Strike Said Reason

Times News Services

Five Vancouver Island post offices are closed today as a result of lockouts ordered by the district director of postal services in Vancouver in the continuing dispute between Ottawa and the postal unions.

Port Alberni, Courtenay, Ladysmith, Campbell River and Duncan post offices were shut down after the union called walkouts in Nanaimo, Vancouver International Airport and Ladner offices.

The five Island centres closed by the post office department all receive their mail through the Nanaimo office. More than 200 workers are involved in British Columbia and close to 1,000 are either on strike or locked out across Canada.

The day's tally shows the unions had called out a total of 580 workers in seven centres across the country.

The post office department retaliated by sending home 416 men from 27 stations.

Robert McGarry, strike director for the Toronto area, said a directive from national strike headquarters in Ottawa said that workers in Barrie, Alliston, Orangeville and the southwest end of the City of Toronto, all in Ontario and in Regina did not report for work today.

He said that according to the Ottawa directive these and the B.C. offices were the only areas where workers would be on strike today.

He also said that post offices in the Ontario centres of Midland and Newmarket and Station W — the northwest end of Toronto — were closed by postal authorities.

"It has to be an illegal lockout," he said. "There's mail in Midland and Newmarket and Station W is loaded."

PLANS SUIT

The Council of Postal Unions said Thursday it is planning legal action against Postmaster-General Eric Kierans because of the shutdowns of local post offices this week.

Centres shut down Thursday were Edmundston, Grand Falls and Campbellton, all in New Brunswick.

Duncan local president of the postal union, Mrs. Mary Woods, said today the shutdown was expected. A total of 17 employees and four rural routes are affected there.

At Ladysmith, where four employees were laid off, postmaster Chuck Irving said there was no mail.

Mrs. Pearl Cassidy, the spokesman for postal workers, said they are "rather disconcerted" because although there are no letters there was work which can be done over the wicket. She called the post office action "rather high-handed" and inconvenient to patrons.

Postmasters called today's action closures because of reduced business, not lockouts.

The Grand Falls post office reopened today and the Edmundston office was scheduled to do so at noon local time. Offices at Campbellton and Dalhousie, also in New Brunswick, were to be closed all day.

Earlier in the week, 13 Ontario and Quebec centres were shut down but re-opened after Montreal workers ended a 48-hour walkout.

The council, negotiating for 27,000 letter carriers and other postal workers, said in a statement that "Kierans' action is not only a violation of various laws and regulations, but is also a vicious act, taken without regard for the citizens of Canada and the postal system."

Post offices were ordered Monday to close down if they thought service could not be provided.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, meanwhile, said he'd be "delighted" if the unions would be willing to accept a settlement of the dispute giving wage increases of 7¼ per cent a year.

Cabinet Splits On Telesat Contract Issue

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A recommendation to the government that the contract for Canada's first telecommunications satellite be awarded to Hughes Aircraft of California has touched off a cabinet fight between Communications Minister Eric Kierans and Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, according to sources here.

'Buy Canadian' Idea Favored

The proposal that the bid be awarded to the American firm was made by Telesat Canada Corporation, for which Kierans is the responsible cabinet minister, and is being disputed by Mackasey on the grounds that it would rob Canada of the opportunity to develop its own science and technology in space communications.

Mackasey is reported to favor giving the contract to a Canadian firm even if the cost would be higher—and it apparently would be.

RCA Limited of Montreal, armed with a letter of intention from the Canadian government, presented a price bid for building Canada's satellite of around $42 million. The company said it understood the intention was to build existing Canadian space technology and to become a leader in the development of a satellite communications system rather than simply a user of the new techniques as they may be developed by others.

As a result of feasibility studies earlier, RCA was chosen as the prime contractor. It received a letter of intent dated June 20, 1969, from Kierans indicating a contract would be negotiated within four months for the development, fabrication, integration and test of the satellite. RCA accepted a direction contained in the letter of intent to use another major Canadian company as a subcontractor.

Company Began to Prepare

On the basis of the letter of intention and RCA's understanding of government desire for a Canadian national space program to upgrade this country's technology in the new field, the company was authorized by its directors to construct an aerospace building specifically for the design, development and construction of space hardware.

It started to hire additional engineers and support personnel in anticipation of the requirements of the program and estimated cost of the new facilities at $4 million.

It came as a shock to the company when its first proposal to Telesat, outlining the high risk involved, was refused on the grounds it was based on RCA's assumption that the development phase of the program should be "cost reimbursable." This had been the practice followed in previous Canadian satellite programs.

RCA was asked to submit a firm price for the program as soon as possible. Specifications were upgraded. RCA then proposed a firm price of $55 million including all non-recurring costs in connection with the new technology. The bid was submitted to Telesat on May 11, 1970.

U.S. Firm Offers Low Bid

At that time Telesat received an unsolitited bid from Hughes Aircraft with Northern Electric Co. Ltd. at around $30 million.

Wednesday a new bid to build the satellite was reportedly presented to the government by a Toronto firm, Spar Aerospace Products Ltd. of Malton. The Spar bid would involve RCA of Canada and Lockheed Aircraft of the U.S. in a new Canadian based company which would build the satellite for a reported $38 million with 65 per cent Canadian content.

At the same time RCA of Canada withdrew its bid and presented a new one.

RCA has informed Telesat and Kierans it would be prepared to enter into discussions looking toward a cost reimbursable incentive approach in which the company's fee would be based on its successfully meeting mutually agreed standards for cost goals, delivery schedules and performance. In these discussions RCA would be prepared to discuss the cost estimates and risk evaluations that it has developed.

It set a target cost of $35 million for the program with 65 per cent Canadian content. It has given its assurance of using its best efforts to complete the program on that basis.

RCA has pointed to the unfortunate circumstances for Canadian industry that would arise if the Canadian domestic satellite were to be built in the U.S. It has offered to hold discussions with Telesat Canada or with other government departments in an effort to resolve the problem that will undoubtedly have a long-term effect on Canada's role in the

By BOB MITCHELL

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson today termed as "most mischievous" remarks by a labor official that deputy minister Bill Sands was appointed mediator in the construction lockout to get Peterson "off the hook."

B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Ray Haynes said Thursday Sands' assignment in talks going on between unions and the Construction Labor Relations Association is to save face for the provincial government.

"The pressure is now on Sands to work hard to get Peterson off the hook," Haynes said.

He was referring to the 10-day deadline set Tuesday by Peterson for both sides in the three-month-old construction lockout to resume work or face compulsory arbitration.

DATE CONFIRMED

Peterson confirmed today the 10-day period will end at midnight July 17, one week from today.

"If Haynes spent as much time trying to settle disputes as he does causing trouble between labor and government, he'd be earning the big salary he gets," Peterson said.

Peterson said Tuesday he wanted work started in 10 days, with a 60-day period to follow in which settlement of the wage dispute between labor and management could take place.

The unions have indicated they won't return to work unless they get signed agreements with the CLRA in the meantime.

Thursday Peterson said if work does not resume by the deadline there won't be any 60-day period, and the government would invoke the back-to-work arbitration section of the Mediation Commission Act.

Iceland Premier Dies in Fire

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (Reuters) — Premier Bjarni Benediktsson, 62, who led the movement bringing Iceland into NATO, was burned to death early today along with his wife and grandson when a fire swept the premier's state-owned summer house at Thingvalla, 38 miles from the capital.

The premier, his wife Sigridur Bjoernsdottir and his two-year-old grandson Benedikt Wilmundarsson went there to spend the night.

Firemen hurried to the scene when the alarm was raised but the wooden building was reduced to ashes.

A neighbor raised the alarm when he saw the house in flames.

Benediktsson, chairman of the Independence party, became premier in November, 1963, when he succeeded Olafur Thors who resigned for health reasons.

He had previously served in the Thors administration as minister of justice and later as foreign minister.

SASK. ORDERS ARBITRATION

REGINA (CP) — Premier Ross Thatcher, taking a step he has threatened for more than a week, today signed his name to an order-in-council bringing Saskatchewan's construction workers under compulsory arbitration.

The emergency measure was to be sent to Lt.-Gov. Stephen Worobetz later in the day for his signature. The law was passed 12 days ago but the final step was withheld in the hope a settlement would be reached.

Thatcher, speaking at a news conference, said amendments bringing plumbers and electricians under scope of the arbitration law "will take effect immediately."

While the plumbers and electricians have returned to work wherever jobs are available, negotiations with contractors on new collective agreements have been deadlocked.

Israeli and Egyptian jets fought several dogfights over the Suez canal today and a Tel Aviv military spokesman said three Egyptian MiG-21s were shot down.

The MiGs were downed by missiles and aerial cannon fire when they tried to intercept a number of Israeli raiders bombing Egyptian targets in the northern sector of the canal this morning, the spokesman said.

TONKIN RESOLUTION REPEALED . . . AGAIN

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The Senate emphasized today its repudiation of the 1964 Tonkin Gulf resolution by voting a second time to repeal it.

The vote was in the form of a resolution to repeal the measure, which was rushed through Congress in August, 1964, following a reported attack by North Vietnamese torpedo boats on two American destroyers.

The congressional action was later used by President Johnson to justify the American troop buildup in Vietnam.

Campbell Moves to Prevent 'Deserter and Hippie Haven'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell has delayed city efforts to help the national hostel task force use the Beattie Street Armory here as a resting place for transient youth.

Campbell deferred for one week a request to use a lot beside the armory for sanitary trailers and said following a council meeting Thursday night he wants to investigate the people involved.

"I was concerned that a military establishment was becoming a draft dodger, deserter and hippie haven," he said. (See Cool-Aid story Page 2).

Later, Deni Robideau, 23, a member of the hostel co-ordinating committee, said the sanitary facilities are needed to expand use of the armory to accommodate about 100 young people, male and female.

Present toilet and washing facilities limit the hostel to 25 males.

Campbell said the idea of separate facilities for males and females was "very moral," but added he was worried "they may be trying to set up communal living."

The federal government hostel plan would provide 2,000 beds for youth travelling across the country.

The state secretary's department has ordered that armories across the country be used for hostels.

Earlier Thursday, Mayor Don L. Gillespie of Revelstoke, a railway town on the western edge of the Rockies, said he had informed Ottawa that the town's armory could not house a hostel because it was in an area zoned for commercial use.
